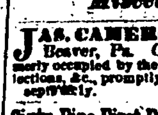
THE GREAT
Baltimore Piano
Manufactory



WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Manufacturers of
GRAND, SQUARE, AND UPRIGHT
PIANO FORTES,
BALTIMORE, MD.
These Instruments have been before the public for nearly Thirty years, and upon their excellence alone attained an unpurchased pre-eminence which pronounces them unequalled. Their combines great power, sweetness and fine singing quality, as well as great purity of Intonation, and sweetness throughout the entire scale. Their is pliant and elastic, and entirely free from the stiffness found in so many Pianos.
TONE
In Workmanship
they are unequalled, using none but the very best seasoned material, the large capital employed in our business enabling us to keep an immense stock of lumber, &c., on hand.
☞ All our Square Pianos have our New Improved Over Strung Scale and the Agraffe Treble.
☞ We would call special attention to our late improvements in GRAND PIANOS and SQUARE GRANDS; Patented Aug. 14, 1866, which bring the Piano nearer perfection than has yet been attained.
Every Piano Fully Warranted for Five Years.
We have made arrangements for the Sole Wholesale Agency for the most Celebrated PARLOR ORGANS and MELODEONS, which we offer Wholesale and Retail, at Lowest Factory Prices.

A REMINDER.

To Debilitated Persons,
To Dyspeptics,
To Sufferers from Liver Complaint,
To those having no Appetite,
To those with Broken Down Constitutions,
To Nervous People,
To Children Wasting Away,
To any with Debilitated Digestive Organs,
Or Suffering with any of the following Symptoms, which indicate Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness, or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the heart, Choking or Fluttering Sensations when in a lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pains in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c.; Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, & Great Depression of Spirits.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.
A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind,
Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or Vital Principle of Roots, Herbs and Barks, (or as medicinally termed Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore, in one Bottle of these Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons of ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters, are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, where they are compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others; no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot, under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC,
Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulent is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the Tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the Bitters is overcome, forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate and containing the medicinal virtue of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1.50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulent used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it will most certainly be cheated.

HOOFLAND'S
German Bitters,
OR HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN TONIC,
WITH HOOFLAND'S
PODOPHYLLIN PILL.
WILL CURE YOU.
They are the Greatest
BLOOD PURIFIERS
Known to the Medical world, and will eradicate diseases arising from impure blood, Debility of the Digestive Organs, or Diseased Liver, in a shorter time than any other known remedies.

The Whole Supreme Court of Penn'a.
SPEAK FOR THESE REMEDIES.
Who would ask for more Dignified or Stronger Testimony?

Hon. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, at present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writes:
PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1867.
I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours truly,
GEORGE W. WOODWARD.

Hon. JAMES THOMPSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.
PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.
I consider Hoofland's German Bitters a valuable medicine in case of attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it. Yours with respect,
JAMES THOMPSON.

Hon. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania:
PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.
I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.
GEORGE SHARSWOOD.

Hon. Wm. F. Rogers, Mayor of the City of Buffalo, New York:
Mayor's Office, Buffalo, June 22, 1869.
I have used "Hoofland's German Bitters and Tonic" in my family during the past year, and can recommend them as an excellent tonic, imparting tone and vigor to the system. Their use has been productive of decidedly beneficial effects.
WM. F. ROGERS.

Hon. Jas. M. Wood, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport, Pennsylvania:
I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food on my stomach, and I became so weak as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure. JAMES M. WOOD.

REMEMBER
THAT
HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC
Will cure every Case of
MARASMUS,
Or Wasting away of the Body.
REMEMBER
HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES
Are the medicines you require to purify the Blood, excite the torpid Liver to healthy action, and to enable you to pass safely through any hardships or exposure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
PODOPHYLLIN,
Or Substitute for Mercury Pills.
TWO PILLS A DOSE.
The Most Powerful, yet Innocent, Vegetable Cathartic known.
It is not necessary to take a handful of these pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels of all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleaning it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.
For all diseases, in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.
In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, regulates the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.
Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can retain its hold, or ever assail you.
Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything else that he may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it. These Remedies will be sent by Express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia

ARTIFICIAL TEETH PERFECTED!—T. J. & H. J. CHANDLER have purchased the exclusive right of Beaver county to use Dr. Stack's Patent by which they can put up Vulcanite as thin as Gold Plate, with a beautiful enameled polish; and so light and elastic as to perfectly adapt itself to the mouth; obviating all that clumsy and bulky condition, so much complained of heretofore; and lessening their liability to break 100 per cent. Indeed, no one seeing it would be willing to wear the old style plate any longer than they could conveniently get them exchanged. All branches of Dentistry performed in the best and most substantial manner. In filling teeth with gold, etc., we challenge competition from any quarter, and can refer to living subjects whose fillings have stood between thirty and forty years. Among the number Hon. John Allison will exhibit fillings we inserted some 35 years ago; the teeth as perfect as the day they were filled. Laughing Gas prepared on a new plan, freeing it from all unpleasant and dangerous effects, making the extraction of teeth a source of pleasure rather than of horror and pain. Prices as low as any good dentist in the State. Office at Beaver Station, Rochester Pa.

SELECT POETRY.

JOHN BURNS OF GETTYSBURG.

Have you heard the story that gossips tell
Of Burns of Gettysburg?—No? Ah, well:
Brief is the glory that hero earns,
Briefer the story of poor John Burns:
He was the fellow who won renown,
The only man who didn't back down
When the rebels rode through his native town
But held his own in the fight next day,
When all his town folks ran away.
That was in July, sixty-three,
The very day that General Lee,
Flower of Southern Chivalry,
Baffled and beaten, backward reeled
From a stubborn Meade and a barren field.

I might tell how, but the day before,
John Burns stood at his cottage door,
Looking down the village street,
Where, in the shade of his peaceful vine,
He heard the low of his gathered kine,
And felt their breath with incense sweet;
Or I might say, when the sunset burned
The old farm gable, he thought it turned
The milk that fell in a babbling flood
Into the milk-pail, red as blood!
Or how he fancied the hum of bees
Were bullets buzzing among the trees,
But all such fanciful thoughts as these
Were strange to a practical man like Burns,
Who minded all his own concerns,
Troubled no more by fancies fine
Than on his calm-eyed, long-tailed kine—
Quite old-fashioned and matter of fact,
Slow to argue, but quick to act.
That was the reason, as some folks say,
He fought so well on that terrible day.

And it was terrible. On the right
Raged for hours the heavy fight,
Thundered the battery's double bass,
Difficult music for men to face;
While on the left—where now the graves
Undulate like the living waves
That all that day unceasing swept
Up to the pits the rebels kept—
Round shot plowed the upland glades;
Sown with bullets, reaped with blades;
Shattered fences here and there
Tossed their splinters in the air;
The very trees were stripped and bare;
The barns that once held yellow grain
Were heaped with harvests of the slain;
The cattle bellowed on the plain,
The turkeys screamed with might and main,
And brooding barn-fowls left their rest
With strange shells bursting in each nest.

Just where the tide of battle turns,
Erect and lonely stood old John Burns.
How do you think the man was dressed?
He wore an ancient long buff vest,
Yellow as saffron—but his best;
And, buttoned over his manly breast,
Was a bright blue coat, with a rolling collar.
And large gilt buttons—size of a dollar,
With tail that the country-folk called "swaller."
He wore a broad-brimmed, bell-crowned hat,
White as the locks on which it sat.
Never had such a sight been seen
For forty years on the village green,
Since old John Burns was a country beau,
And went to the "quiltings" long ago.

Close at his elbows all that day,
Veterans of the Peninsula,
Sunburnt and bearded, charged away;
And striplings, downy of lip and chin,
Clerks that the Home Guards mustered in,
Glanced, as they passed, at the hat he wore,
Then at the rifle his right hand bore;
And hailed him, from out their youthful lore,
With scraps of a slangy repertoire:
"How are you, White Hat?" "Put her through!"
"Your head's level," and "Bully for you!"
Called him "Daddy"—begged he'd disclose
The name of the tailor who made his clothes,
And what was the value he set on those;
While Burns, unmindful of jeer and scoff,
Stood there picking the rebels off—
With his long brown rifle, and bell-crown hat,
And the swallow-tails they were laughing at.

'Twas but a moment, for that respect
Which clothes all courage their voices checked;
And something the wildest could understand
Spoke in the old man's strong right hand;
And his corded throat, and the lurking frown
Of his eyebrows under his old bell crown;
Until, as they gazed, there crept an awe
Through the ranks in whispers, and some men saw,
In the antique vestments and long white hair,
The past of the Nation in battle there;
And some of the soldiers since declare
That the gleam of his old white hat afar,
Like the crested plume of the brave Navarre,
That day was their oriflamme of war.

So raged the battle. You know the rest:
How the rebels, beaten and backward pressed,
Broke at the final charge, and ran.
At which John Burns—a practical man—
Shouldered his rifle, unbent his brows,
And then went back to his bees and cows.

That is the story of old John Burns;
This is the moral the reader learns:
In fighting the battle, the question's whether
You'll show a hat that's white, or a feather!

SELECT MISCELLANY.

ETHEL ROMER'S MISTAKE.

Valentine's Day! as soft and sweet a day as any birds could wish for mating in; promise of violet in its breath—promise of roses in its sunshine. Though, to be sure, the boughs are bare as yet, and there were no green things growing, save in the pots which Ethel Romer had been putting out on the broad window-sill to catch the sunshine. The thing that savored most of spring was Ethel Romer herself as beautiful a woman as ever an artist painted, or poet sang of. Within, near the fire, sat Dr. Ralph Romer himself. Spring had left him long before. If winter frosts were not upon his head, autumn had touched it with gray.

Ethel's musing was interrupted. The postman's rap did it. An envelope, with a pretty border, fancifully sealed, and her name upon it, was put into her hand. At the sight she blushed rosy red, knowing well what lay therein, and went back to the fireside with the thing in her hand.

"For me?" asked Ralph.

"No," she said, "for me."

If he had only shown some curiosity then—if he had only looked at her jealously; had there been some shadow of the love in her mien, all might have been different; but he went on with his book, and she carried her valentine to her own room, to read it there in quiet.

Yes, it was a valentine. Three times had that day returned since she married Dr. Ralph Romer, and each time had it brought just such an envelope, with just such passionate lines upon the page within, written in the same feigned hand. Again and again she read it over—again and again—just as she had the others, and thought, oh, how bitterly! what a beautiful thing life might have been to her, blest with such a glowing love as this—life that must be always cold and wintry, having only the calm, quiet, commonplace affection which her gray-haired husband gave her for all the wealth of golden spring time warmth that she felt within her soul—for all the beauty that many an ardent youth had coveted in her girlhood.

Could it be the fair-haired student who sat near them in church? or the dark-eyed soldier, with an empty sleeve, who passed their garden so often? On whom had she made such an impression? while he whose life she shared saw in her only a good woman, who needed much sage advice and counsel.

Her poor heart ached, as her head did. She felt wicked and ashamed, and very miserable; and forgot how time was flying, and her housewife duties pressed upon her, until the sinking sun reminded her of them.

Even then she took one look in the glass, and thought, if she did not say it, that a great deal of beauty had been cast away on quiet, unromantic Ralph Rome.

After tea they walked out together, and stood beside the pond in the garden, and saw the gold fish in its depth; and he told her of the general habits of gold fish. The writer of valentines would have spoken—so thought Ethel—of her golden hair. The stars came out, and he spoke of them, not of her bright eyes.

She wanted to turn upon him and say, "What are these things worth, compared with warm and living love?" She longed to ask him why he had given her that woeful fate—why he had caged the heart he could not care for. "Any woman could have made your tea, and listened to your talk of astronomy and natural history," were the words on her lips, "I was made to love, and to be loved again."

But she said nothing. He saw her beside him, a little paler and a little stiller than of yore, that was all.

But from this time forth the little happiness that had still lingered in Ethel's life was at an end. She grew desperate, and seized upon the only possible relief to the monotony of her life. Very beautiful, very lively, much courted by the village coterie, she found no difficulty in becoming that most detestable creature, a married flirt.

Ralph Romer never sought to keep her home, but he seldom went out with her. More than once the gold-haired student or the dark-eyed soldier had found it the most natural thing in the world to act as escort home after that social evening, and no harm was done; only there were too many blushes, too many smiles, too lingering a clasp of parting hands when one remembered that Ethal Romer was a wife. Home was neglected; but Ralph did not complain.

So the long year rolled around, and Valentine's Day came again. Ethel had watched and waited for its coming—not quite the same pure-hearted Ethel. Thoughts she dared not utter had crept into her soul. The soldier with the great black eyes and soft voice, who made his empty sleeve only another charm to win hearts—who had told her all he dared with his tongue, and more with glance and sigh—must, she had long ago decided, be the writer of those valentines, so full of love and pathos so tender, so different from anything that Ralph Romer ever felt or uttered.

She had given him a hint, and if it were he, she would surely know it this day. And, if it were he, then Ethel knew it had been better for her never to have been born; for the sake of him who wrote those love poems she was willing to forsake home and husband, and wifely name and fame and be the scorn and flout of the whole village. To be loved for a little while, and then die, was all she asked.

"If it comes to that," she said, answering her own thoughts, "how my name will ring. It will be blacker than Satan. Do you know—those proper, frozen village woman, who will scorn me so—what it is for a loving woman to lead a loveless life? It withers one as neglect and cold have withered those poor flowers there."

For Ethel had set forth no flower-pots in the sun to-day, nor for many days. That morning she had watched her husband ride away on his great brown horse, thinking how grave and serious he was, how old in all his ways, how old-mannish was his gray overcoat and broad-rimmed hat, saying to herself, "If I were to leave him, and he was to find the house empty, he would go on reading, or comfort himself with a new insect or a new planet. No need to wonder how he would take it."

And since then she had watched at the window guiltily and miserably for the valentine, so sure she thought to come.

At last she saw a figure coming fast towards the house, and the blood flew to her cheeks and her heart beat fast; but it was not the postman; only a neighbor with blanched face and frightened eyes, that told bad news before he uttered it.

She went out to meet him, and they stood there looking at each other for a moment. Over the hills a little crowd was coming slowly, something in its midst.

"Dont be too frightened, Mrs. Romer," gasped the man at last. "It may not be as bad as they think. The horse shied just before the post-office, and the doctor was thrown. He hasn't come to yet. Oh, no, no." For she had thrown herself upon her knees and cried out that he was dead. "Not dead, not dead yet, Mrs. Romer."

But the wretched woman knew that death was very near, and the flood of agony that swept across her heart told her that she had not ceased to love her quiet husband.

They brought him in, and from that moment for many long days and nights she kept watch beside his bed, thinking of no other thing on earth praying only that he might be spared to her. She suffered agonies of remorse. Every false thought pursued her with a revengeful stab.

The gray overcoat hanging on the wall, which she had thought old-mannish and like him as he rode away, seemed to taunt her with the thought that it would never be worn again. She could not bear the sight of it longer, and so one day she took it softly in her hand to hang it in a certain closet. As she lifted it something fell from one of the pockets—a letter or a paper. She stooped to recover it, and saw a fanciful envelope with a bright seal, and her name upon it. Such were the valentines that came to her. This was surely one of them. What could it mean? had her husband discovered the writer? had there been some cause for the accident of which she knew nothing? She looked at the envelope again. It had never been posted.

Ethel began to tremble from head to foot. She sank down on her knees, clasping the valentine between both hands, and held it thus for awhile. Could it be? could it be? oh, could it be? She opened it. The same glowing verse, though sadder and more hopeless, telling of love unreturned. The same measure in the same feigned hand, yet not at all unknown. Had she never before seen that little flourish, that peculiar formation of a letter?

"Oh, heaven, make me sure!" sobbed Ethel, and found her way somehow to her husband's desk and opened it.

Within lay envelopes like those upon the valentine, a little box of such gay seals, and fragments of verse—the proof that the writer of these passionate poems, of those wild protestations of love was no other than Ralph Romer.

She crept back to his bedside and kissed his face and delirious eyes. She prayed to be forgiven with a sense of remorse and shame such as she might have felt had she been more wicked, and heaven listened to her. The crisis passed with safety, and Ralph Romer's eyes opened themselves upon a face pallid with grief and worn with watching, but beautiful with her love and constancy. When one day, her head upon his bosom, she told him all, he also had his tale to tell.

"I am old and gray, you see, and such love only seems to belong to youth. I could not speak it, but I felt it, and I put my thoughts into verse—and I sent them to you, my darling, with the hope that you would know whence they came [illegible], though hardly with a hope that you could give him more than a child's respect and duty."

But she had given him more—she had given him all a woman's might, and this she told him.

They are together still, I think they have forgotten that one is young and the other old, in the [illegible] youth of both their hearts. [illegible] that one long talk they said [illegible] more; but there [illegible] no second thing. He tells her [illegible] of all his scholar [illegible] talks of the stars and the [illegible] of themselves. [illegible] is content. She has but to [illegible] those treasured valentines [illegible] bound together with blue [illegible] some sacred hiding-place [illegible] record of her happiness. [illegible] is no empty nook in her warm [illegible] the angels of love and [illegible] hands beside their hearthstone.

From the Christian Advocate.

[illegible]

BY REV. M. [illegible].

"I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I cannot tell, or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth;) such a one caught up to the third heaven."

I have been requested by many persons to give to the public an account of a very singular occurence that has transpired recently within the bounds of my district. I shall give you names, dates, and facts, allowing your readers to draw their own inferences; and, desiring that any one who may be incredulous as to the facts may have the privilege of ascertaining their verity, as there are, perhaps more than a hundred persons in that neighborhood, who will readily bear witness.

On the seventh of November, Rev. Joseph N. Pershing, of the Saltsburg circuit, began a series of meetings at Kelly's station on the West Penn. Railroad, where the Methodists have a small, unfinished church and a very feeble society. The few composing the church were disheartened and seemed reluctant to co-operate with the pastor at the beginning of the meeting. However, as the work began to take on more hopeful features they entered upon it with a degree of cordiality. While these meetings were in progress in the church, a company of Universalists met each evening in a house near by, for the purpose of discussing their doctrines of belief. They indulged freely in ridiculing Methodist doctrines and usages, as also orthodoxy in general, and did their utmost to divert the minds of the people from the subject of personal salvation. The pastor was ordered by certain of these to erase from the church records the names of some of their young people who had joined the church, at the same time threatening their children with punishment should they go to the altar of prayer.

During the second Sabbath evening of the meeting the opposition became very violent, and the prospect was so discouraging that the pastor had about concluded to close the meetings. A sermon was preached, however, and penitents invited forward, when a young lady, Miss Emeline Taylor, a daughter of Mr. John Taylor, of White's station, a young lady of quiet and amiable disposition, came forward for prayer.

With the exception of her mother and herself, all the members of her family were either members of the Universalist Church or strongly in sympathy with their doctrines. One of her brothers took a very leading part in their public discussions. She remained at the altar for quite a length of time, appearing to be calm in mind, and yet earnestly and devoutly looking for the mercy of God. About nine o'clock, her prayer seemed to have been answered. Her face wore an expression of unusual brightness as she looking upward repeated several times with distinct emphasis, "O that beautiful place over there!" She became entirely unconscious and was carried to a house near by, it being thought unadvisable to remove her to her father's house, which was about three miles distant. In this condition she remained for seven days, in the mean time taking no nourishment whatever.

On Tuesday she began to speak in a low tone of voice and for half an hour told of the scenes of another world, after which she remained silent for several hours. She spoke of having been conducted to the place of lost souls, had heard their wailings of despair, and was then conducted to the gates of heaven. Her description of what she saw and heard, was so vivid and transporting, that the large company present wept freely. She spoke of those whom she had known, who had died, and who were recognized in glory, clad in shining raiment with unknown names on their foreheads. She called them over by name, one after another, including the names of all the children she had known who had died, with all those tokens of surprise and delight, that attend an actual greeting of long absent friends.

The first of whom she spoke, were two ministers, one was the Rev. A. H. Thomas of the Pittsburgh Conference, the other was the Rev. Mr. White of the Presbyterian Church, once the pastor of the church at Saltsburg, but for some years before had resigned his charge for another in Ohio. He was not known to any present as deceased, but upon inquiry it was found that he had died a few days before. Of this event, neither Miss Taylor, nor any member of her father's family had heard.

Persons were recognized there whom she did not expect to see, while others for whom she inquired she was informed were not among that number. Many other things concerning another world, were written down and are lying before me, expressed in language most beautiful and appropriate, but which if given would trespass upon the columns of your paper.

Many expedients were used to restore her to consciousness, among which were singing and animated religious services, but all without the desired effect. On Friday her friends became very much alarmed, owing to the opinions expressed by the physicians that having been so long without food she would never be restored. The effort was made to give her some nourishment, but in vain. She was asked if she would ever be able to rise? when she replied, "My Savior has not yet told me." At different times she had spoken of her Savior as present with her as her Guide and Instructor. Shortly after this she told them that her Savior had just informed her that she might return to earth on Sabbath evening at nine o'clock. This statement occasioned a joyful surprise to her anxious friends. The father said that should it thus come to pass he would believe all she would say concerning the future state.

On Sabbath evening a large company of the neighbors had gathered to learn the sequel. There was no clock in her room, nor any way in which she could mark the flight of the hours, for her eyes had remained closed from the first. At three minutes before nine she raised her right hand and waved it as if giving farewell to persons vanishing in the distance, and then raised her left hand in like manner, and at precisely nine o'clock she opened her eyes, spoke a greeting to her friends, began praising the Lord, and called upon those around to join her in praise for His great mercy. When asked if she was hungry, she replied that she was not so in the least; that she had been fed with milk and honey, and indeed her strength was so wonderfully renewed that it seemed that she had been fed by an unseen hand.

The original paper on which those statements were written as they fell from her lips, is in the hands of Rev. J. N. Pershing. It is a most remarkable narration of events, and a description of scenes that she still avers were as real to her as any other in her whole life. As to the effect of this event upon the community, there was no further opposition to the meeting. One of the gentlemen who had ordered his son's name stricken from the church list, came to the pastor and desired that it might remain there. The meeting went forward gloriously, with many conversions, and the number of members doubled at that appointment.

LITTLE JIM AND LITTLE HI.

When Jas. E. Boogs of our city, was a boy, he resided in Indiana, on a farm, and was a live little Hoosier; and, he was the fastest corn-husker in all that country around about his father's old farm—according to his own story. He was the champion in the corn field, and was looked upon by his companions as a hero. So, one day as he was dreaming over his local glory, in the sunshine, by the old barn, in Indiana, the question occurred to him, as he had outstripped all his competitors in his native rural district, "Why could he not achieve the same success in the scenes of life, out in the world, away from home?" This question agitated him very much, until one day, in the [illegible] of the year, over twenty years ago, he packed his little bundle of clothes, and told his family that he was going out into the world to seek his fortune.

The importunities of father, mother, sisters and brothers had no effect; that same determined and bold spirit, which has pushed him on in many large and successful business enterprises in his mature years, was as strong in the Little Jim as it is in the Big Jim, and he struck out for the nearest village, with his little bundle of personal effects in his hand, without once even looking back upon the scenes of his childhood.

The old house, the meadows, the corn fields, where he had been the victor in a thousand contests; the blue hills that slumbered serenely in the distant landscape, the companions of his boyhood; his father, mother, sisters and brothers and all that was dear to him, were left behind without one tear or sigh of regret. He was too much absorbed in the future career of his life to think of such things in the sentimental mood of a poet.

Many days elapsed before he struck a suitable business, and in the meantime he traveled like the "Wandering Jew," through many a city and hamlet, until he found himself in Bryan, a small town in Ohio.

Here he formed the acquaintance of a lad of about his own age, by the name of Hiram Jones, who was also on a tramp. The two put what little cash they had together, purchased a stock of gold pens, and formed a copartnership in the pen peddling business, under the firm name of Boogs & Jones. Their plan of operations was soon arranged, and they struck out from house to house peddling gold pens.

They had been in the business but a few hours when a great calamity befell the firm of Boogs & Jones. They did not fail, because they both had too much energy and enterprise; nor were they burned out, as they had no permanent business location, nor was the cause of their misfortune to be attributed to the absconding of either of the partners. No, it was something far more deplorable. They were arrested for doing business without a license, and thrown into jail!

This was hard on the partners, still it did not dampen their ardor one whit. After remaining in durance vile for several days, they were taken out and tried for their offense and fined. It took every red cent, and their entire stock of gold pens to liquidate the fine.

They were now in a bad fix; two jail birds, dead broke and hungry, alone in the world, far away from home, among the people who looked upon them as two dangerous criminals. This state of affairs was galling to them, and they concluded to jump the town, which they did without farther ceremony.

This was the result of Jas. E. Boog's first business venture, from which he says he learned a world of knowledge, which he has put to good use in his later years.

Twenty years or more has elapsed since that time. Hiram Jones since then has become the Assistant Superintendent of the Michigan Division of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad, while his partner, Jas. E. Boogs, has become one of the heaviest wholesale and retail merchants in the Northwest.

During all the years of their respective ups and downs in the world's battle, they have never met each other since they parted company in those early days of discouragement and business prostration. The other day, however, Mr. Jones walked into Mr. Boog's establishment in this city, and inquired for Mr. Jas. E. Boogs. One of the clerks informed him that he was in the office, near the rear end of store. Mr. Jones entered the office and found Jim smoking a Wheeling stogy, and in a very social frame of mind. Mr. Jones was directed to a seat. After a few formal remarks Jim told a story, which was followed by another from Hi, in which he recited, substantially, the facts above given. Before the story was finished, Jim was growing deeply interested in the narration which was so similar to the one in which he had played a prominent part, that he chewed his stoga like a stick of candy. The narration went on, when directly Jim jumped to his feet, just as Jones was speaking of his partner in the gold pen business, and exclaimed:

"If my memory has not entirely gone crazy, I am that partner!"

Jones, who was aware of this fact all the while, also sprung to his feet, and they shook hands until the crockery on the shelves rattled.

Jones, who had got possession of Jim's husking peg while they were in jail together, had always kept it, and as soon as he could get his hand into his pocket, he hauled it out and asked Jim if he recognized the little instrument, with which he had won so many glorious victories in his "harum-scarum" days, when he was a boy in Indiana?

The peg was readily recognized, but nothing would induce Jones to surrender it. He said it was one of his most cherished mementos. It always reminded him of a very interesting chapter in his life, and he would not part with it under any circumstances.

Mr. Jones remained here a few days, and then returned to his home in Michigan, well pleased with his visit to his first partner in business.—Sioux City Journal.

—The Indianapolis Journal says: "We now believe in the doctrine of total depravity. Some one has stolen the only pair of boots owned by the editor of the Leavenworth Independent, thus confining him to the house till the opening of the bare-foot season."

The Beaver Argus

J. WEYAND, Editor and Proprietor.

Beaver, Pa., March 8th, 1871.

THE bill providing for the celebration of the hundreth anniversary of our independence, at Philadelphia, on the fourth of July, 1876, has passed both Houses of Congress. All Pennsylvanians will rejoice at the selection of our chief city, as the place for this most interesting National demostration.

HON. THOMAS H. BURROWES, Pres't. of Pennsylvania Agricultural College, died at his residence in Centre county on the 27th ult., Mr. Burrowes had been a prominent men in this State for a number of years, having been Secretary of State, State Superintendent of Public Schools and editor of the State School Journal, all of which positions he filled satisfactorily to the people, in whose interest he labored.

THE bill creating a territorial form of Government for the District of Columbia has passed both Houses of Congress, and been signed by the President, under the requirements of the act the President appoinetd Henry D. Cooke of Georgetown D. C. as Governor of the the New Territory. This appointment seems to give general satisfaction.

THE labors of the Forty-first Congress have been concluded, and a new Congress takes it place. Very little important business has been done this session. Those measures which the public were most anxious to have passed, the repeal of the Income Tax and the abolition of the Franking Privilege, have, through most dextrous manoevering, been laid over from time to time until the expiration of the session. An unusual number of subsidy schemes have been considered and defeated. One of our leading weeklies says, on the whole, "The last session, though in appearance a barren one, has been really very creditable, owing to the fact that nearly every thing has been left alone." In the new Congress, fifteen contested election cases are pending, with the probability of there being two or three more, which is certainly a great improvement; there having been over thirty contests in the House of last Congress.

To apportion the State satisfactorily to both of the political parties, will be attended with no little difficulty. Each party having control of one branch of the Legislature it is not likely that a bill originating in either will become a law without changes by a conference committee. The House has not yet perfected its bill, but the one presented by the Senate districts the State as follows: It provides that until the next septennial enumeration there shall be thirty-three Senators and one hundred Representatives. The following is the Senatorial apportionment: Philadelphia four, Chester and Delaware one, Montgomery one, Bucks and Northampton one, Berks one, Lancaster one, Schuylkill one, Lehigh and Carbon one, Dauphin and Lebanon one, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike and Wayne two, Bradford, Susquehanna and Wyoming one, Columbia, Lycoming and Sullivan one, Potter, Tioga, McKean and Cameron one, Clinton, Northumberland, Union and Montour one, Blair, Cambria, Clearfield and Elk one, Cumberland and York one, Adams and Franklin one, Huntingdon, Bedford and Fulton one, Snyder, Juniata, Mifflin, Center and Perry one, Allegheny three, Indiana, Jefferson and Armstrong one, Somerset and Westmoreland one, Fayette, Greene and Washington one, Beaver, Lawrence and Butler one, Clarion, Venango, Forest and Mercer one, Crawford, Erie and Warren two.

The following is the Representative apportionment: Adams and Franklin two, Allegheny seven, Armstrong one, Beaver one, Bedford and Fulton one, Berks three, Blair one, Bradford, Sullivan and Wyoming two, Bucks two, Butler one, Cambria one, Cameron and Clinton one, Carbon one, Chester two, Center and Clearfield two, Clarion and Forest one, Columbia one Crawford two, Cumberland one, Dauphin two, Delaware one, Erie two, Elk and Jefferson one, Fayette one, Greene one, Huntingdon one, Indiana one, Juniata, Mifflin and Perry two, Lancaster three, Lawrence one, Lebanon one, Lehigh two, Luzerne and Monroe five, Lycoming, Snyder and Union two, Mercer one, McKean and Potter one, Montgomery two, Montour and Northumberland one, Northampton two, Pike and Wayne one, Schuylkill three, Somerset one, Susquehanna one, Tioga one, Venango one, Warren one, Westmoreland two, York two, Washington one, Philadelphia nineteen.

According to the figuring of politicians this apportionment makes the Senate stand seventeen Democrats to sixteen Republicans, the House fifty-one Democrats to forty-nine Republicans.

The House bill will very likely give the Republicans a small majority in both branches of the Legislature and then will come the tug of war.

THE treaty of peace agreed upon by the representatives of the German and French powers some ten days ago was ratified by the French Assembly on last Wednesday. The vote stood yeas 546 to 107 nays. On the same day the Germans entered Paris, without encountering any disturbances. The entry of the Germans into the conquered city is thus announced: At the hour which had been appointed, ten o'clock, the first representative corps of the victorious army entered the enciente under the eye of his Imperial Majesty. In accordance with the programme, favored by the splendid weather, the Eleventh corps, numbering 30,000, with ninety-six pieces of field artillery and the usual proportion of cavalry, under command of General Von Rose, advanced in two columns, one at Porte Neuilly, the other at Pont Du Jour. The former advanced at a rapid pace up the avenue Grand Armee, direct for the Arc de Triumphe, the French troops vacating the streets as the Germans approached. The other column, entering at the Pont du Jour, below Autiulel, commenced the march a ong the quay on the north side of the Seine, direct for the Place de la Concorde, where the rendezvous of the two columns is fixed.

The zone surrendered to the Germans was almost entirely free of French. It commences at the extreme southwest corner of the enciente which forms a point and runs in the shape of an irregular triangle, of which the Seine forms the east side, the enciente from Pont du Jour to Pont des Tirne the west, the Faubourg Honore, avenue des Ternes from the Rue Royale to the enciente the north side, or base. The only points within these limits retained by the French are the baking establishments of the army of Paris, the Quai de Bill, and the Pont du Jena. The triangle was well chosen for strategic purposes, with its right protected by the Seine. Nothing could exceed the splendid appearance of the troops, despite the hard service they had seen. The rest afforded them during the armistice seems to have obliterated most of the traces of the campaign.

The shops closed the windows facing the streets, and the aspect of the city is desolate. The Nationals are posted as piquets on every avenue, with lines of sentries across the streets to prevent the soldiers going beyond the line of demarcation. From ten to twelve o'clock a. m. the same aspect was presented, with more people in the streets in small crowds, and with more Nationals on duty. At the Rue Royale, Rivoli and the Place Concorde there are double lines of wagons cutting off communication with civilians, who are allowed to pass the Champ Elysees. Most of the women out are in mourning and going to mass. The men are depressed in spirits, and the conversation is on the unfortunate state of Paris and France, but no threats against the government. At eight o'clock a. m. hardly a person was seen. All the houses are closed.

At 9 a. m. the head of the Prussian advance was seen rounding the Arc de Triomphe. To the surprise of the few who were present, both men and women were seen hurrying away in tears, and only boys and few workmen were left. The German Hussars galloped down every avenue leading to the Champs Elysees, to search the streets branching therefrom. Not the slightest attempt at disturbance occurred. The conduct of the people was admirable. About 4,000 infantry and cavalry only advanced. There was no music, but a drum was beat and a trumpet sounded. A splendid body of men, whose marching is equal to household troops, halted opposite the Palais d'Industrie, which was at once taken possession of by the hussars. A few Uhlans ride down the Place de la Concorde, where they view with derision the faces of the statues covered with crape. The Germans are astonished at the mournful aspect of the city and the desertion of the streets.

The German troops all evacuated Paris on Friday last, in accordance with the terms of the Peace Convention. The French Mobiles and National Guards, have been disbanded; and the trenches around the city of Harve are being filled up. The barricades of Paris have been removed. There are no longer any restrictions in going to or from Paris. The Germans, during their stay in the city, behaved well.

Two years of Gen. Grant's Administration being now completed, Mr. Boutwell reports the reduction by payment of the principal of the National Debt since March 1, 1869, at $204,751,413, or a little ever One Hundred Millions of Dollars per annum. O that we could have had the forecast to keep right on at this rate till the last dime of the Debt was paid, or at least till all that remained had been funded in an American Consol paying one per cent. interest at the close of each quarter! And, had the Treasury been kept empty by buying up or paying off Debt, it might have been done.—New York Tribune.

Mr. McPherson, Clerk of the House of Representatives, has just completed a list of the members of the House, having for this purpose taken the certificates of the Governors of the several States. The certificate of the member from the IIId District of Arkansas is not yet received. The following is the classification of the politics of the two parties: Republican, 130; Democratic, including the IIId District of Arkansas, 96; Independent, viz.: James G. Blair of Missouri, 1; total, 227; vacancy in Illinois, caused by the election of Logan to the Senate, 1; vacancy in Michigan, caused by the election of Ferry to the Senate, 1; making total, 229; not elected—New Hampshire, 3; Connecticut, 4; Texas, 4; California, 3; total number of members, 243. Two, Du Bois of Georgia, and Rogers of North Carolina, and probably Waddell of North Carolina, are barred by the XIVth Amendment. They will not be able to qualify until their disabilities are removed by act of Congress. All of the old officers of the House were renominated by the Republican caucus, and re-elected.

The Democrats held a caucus a few evenings before the Forty-second Congress convened, and nominated Morgan of Ohio for Speaker; Barrett for Clerk; Isenberg for Sergeant at-arms; Thorne for Doorkeeper; Gales for Postmaster; and Cooper for Chaplain.

A TELEGRAM from Salt Lake city, dated March 4th says there is great excitement at Ogden four miles from Salt Lake City concerning the gold placer diggings discovered there. Several nuggets have been found and claims are rapidly being taken up. Business is neglected and there is a general stampede for the ground. A letter from a reliable party in East Canon, says good placer diggings have been struck there and claims located for miles. All is excitement. The smelting of this canon are also running successfully. There is considerable snow in the mountains, which prevents prospecting.

ON Saturday last, Secretary Boutwell directed the Assistant Treasurer to notify the holders of 3 per cent certificates of March 2d, 1867, and July 25th, 1868, that all such certificates bearing date from October 15th, 1867 to December 16th, 1867 inclusive, of the denomination of $5,000 each between numbers 861 and 1,998, of the denomination of $10,000 between numbers 730 and 1,070, will be paid on presentation at his office, and that from and after the 30th of April, 1871, such certificates will cease to bear interest and will be no longer available as a portion of the lawful reserve in possession of any National banking association.

HERE AND THERE.

—A Southern newspaper calls Washington and Gen. Lee "twin heirs of immortal fame," but it evidently considers Gen. Lee by far the biggest twin of the two.

The woman, who gave the name of Emma Williams, was committed by Justice Fowler. Many of the articles were identified by Mr. Robert Meares, of Sixth avenue and Nineteenth street, as having been stolen from his store.

—A few days since, a well dressed young woman was arrested in New York for shop-lifting. She had beneath her skirts, and fastened to her waist, by strong cords, a canvas pocket, about three feet and a half long and fully three feet wide. From this bag the following articles were produced:

Two bottles of wine, fifty yards of guanpore lace, two baby's dresses, embroidered and tucked. One piece of mauve velvet trimming, two pairs of kid gloves, seventy-five pairs of children's fancy stockings, one fancy-figured glass, seventy-five yards of blue and green velvet trimming, one pair of jet earrings, and one large Bible.

—A sad affair recently occured at Fort Wayne, Indiana. On Sunday morning Mr. John E. Belrough and a Miss Towbridge were married. On Monday morning the young wife was seized with convulsions, proceeding, it is thought, from brain fever, which continued at short intervals until Tuesday morning, when she died.

—Not long since several female medical students appeared at a lecture on clinics at Brockley Hospital, Philadelphia, and were greeted with hisses by men of the medical profession present. The Philadelphia Press denounces this with some severe words. It says before ten years every physician in Pennsylvania will deny he ever insulted a woman physician or attempted to bar the doors of the profession against her.

—At Mansfield, Ohio, the retail liquor dealers have invented the following mode of avoiding the penalty of the State liquor law, which gives a woman the right of action for damages against the man who sells strong drink to her husband. The wife waives her right to action by signing her name to the following card: "To ——I hereby authorize you to give my husband whatever he wants to drink, so long as he can stand up and pay for it.

—Indiana has fallen, not from grace, but from its primacy in easy divorces. Connecticut has now assumed the first place, for which we hope there are not many aspirants. Obtaining divorces in the "wooden nutmeg" state is an art that has many mysteries, and of which a certain shyster known as the "divorce lawyer"—a mushroom freshly sprung from matrimonial infelicities—is the hero.

—There is a dreadful want at Beaufort, S. C. They want "a hearse," not, The Republican explains, "from the frequency of its use, but out of credit to the town and respect for those who are called upon to use it." Well, it is rather hard that a dead man should loudly demand, "A hearse! A hearse! My kingdom for a hearse!" and not be able to get one. We trust that the defunct will haunt the neighborhood fearfully until the proper authorities purchase the necessary but convenient vehicle.

—From Alabama we hear that the negroes of Russell County "have generally contracted for the year and gone to work"—from which we infer certainly not without reason, that the negroes of Russell County were fairly treated and honorably paid last year. On the other hand, from Florida we get intelligence that the negroes are hanging back—that they "demand exorbiant prices"—that they even in some cases, refuse to labor on any terms, "insisting upon renting lands and farming upon their own hook"—and that is not a very bad hook after all.

—Auburn, Ill., has a great scandal. There came to that place, from Ohio, a young gentleman who had eloped with his stepmother! The father and husband wrote to the errant wife to come home and be forgiven; she swore that she would rather die than leave her "affinity," and the youth was equally ardent. But rather came after her and carried her off, leaving his son inconsolably howling. Children have not usually been over fond of stepmothers, generally manifesting a disposition to run away from them than with them. However these odd things are not without precedent ancient and classical.

—Ghosts in our day are becoming very cheap and plentiful. There is a lively one just now haunting the residence of Rev. Mr. Thrasher, of Botecourt county, Va., a troublesome apparition, given to turning beds topsy-turvy, upsetting barrels in the garret, throwing logs of wood into the rooms, and doing all other things which ghosts have from time immemorial turned their invisible hands to. But this Virginia ghost has not only been heard but seen, and he looks like a man, it is said, of which we have not the least doubt. Sometimes your ghost is a highly mischievous girl, but this kind is not usually so muscular. The Rev. Mr. Thrasher may rest assured that close and persistent investigation will clear up the mystery.

—The trustees of a certain church in western Pennsylvania, having fallen in arrears with the minister's salary for six months, determined to pay him up "in trade." They waited on him, and after the family had gathered around the spokesman said: "Mr. Brown, we have a very pleasant duty to perform. We have come to remunerate you for your labors in our church for the last six months; in fact, we have brought you your salary. Mr. Jones just undo Mr. Brown's salary and hand it to him." Jones did as requested, and handed Mr. Brown the following articles: Ten feet of stove-pipe, two papers of corn starch, one felt hat, three kegs of varnish, one paper collar, four palm-leaf hats, and two bundles of bed slats. At the sight of these Brown became raving mad. The trustees were ejected through the window sash, and all the family immediately vanished.

—Brete Harte made himself a reputation by his racy and original poems and sketches, but he will have a still wider repute if he escapes spoiling by the injudicious conduct of his friends and admirers. Excessive eulogy and absurd ovation seem conspiring to his literary ruin. The most frantic demonstrations have been made in Chicago. One form of testimonial there took the shape of a proposition to present him with, and assure the support of a monthly magazine. But the scheme failed through Harte's non appearance at a dinner-party, to which he had been invited. The offended leaders of Chicago society instantly resolved that Harte should have no magazine, and he is now looking for a literary establishment in some other city. If Harte is a man of taste he must covet retirement, and if he is wise he will certainly seek it.

SECRETARY Boutwell on the 6th inst., heard from several points where subscriptions for the new loan were opened, and learns that between four and five millions have been taken. This report did not include the whole country. He expects to hear from Europe within forty-eight hours, and feels confident that the news will be very favorable. He thinks that the new loans necessary to be placed by the governm'ts off the continent will not interfere much with the success of ours, because we can offer much better assurance of payment, and other things being equal, the securities of the United States will be preferred to any others.

THE Joint Committee of Congress, appointed to wait upon the President and inform him that the Forty-second Congress had assembled, and was ready to receive any message he might wish to communicate, performed their duty on Monday last. The President replied that he had no message to communicate at present, but that he would be prepared to make a communication in a week.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

From The Pittsburgh Commercial.

"I wonder why Miss Smith has left school," said a teacher to a fellow laborer. I do not know but I cannot say I am sorry," was the response. Two days after the conversation was continued, as the teachers met at recess. "I have heard why Miss Smith left. Her mother said she did not learn enough, had not enough studies and we ranked her too low." "I would like to show her mother my class book. In the three recitations she had to me she never had a perfect lesson." "Well, what is worse, her mother blames us, when she allows the girl to go to parties, sociables, have beaus the remaining evenings of the week, and then thinks we ought to drive the nonsense out of her head in five hours of the twenty-four, and at the same time stock it with useful knowledge." "Yes, and she is only one out of the many," was the response in a sad tone.

There are several evils which this incident shows, and to the truth of which every teacher can testify. When parents are dissatisfied with anything in the education of their children, how many of them go to the teachers and in a polite way speak of it and desire to have it rectified? Not one in fifty. Instead of that the child is withdrawn from the school, and the evil which might be rectified, and which is often imaginary, is told to other patrons, much to the injury of faithful and careful teachers. Back of this fault and leading to it is another very prevalent one, the habit of encouraging children to tell what has occured in school and upholding them in any act of insubordination; even if not directly upholding, still by a laugh at a saucy reply showing yourself plainly on the side of the offender. In family after family this is done, and what is the consequnce? Of course it must lead directly to a scorning of the teacher's authority and disrespect.

Parents must be prejudiced by what their children tell them concerning their teachers, but it is an easy matter to withhold your opinion until you have discovered wherein lies the fault. We would not have parents shut themselves off from sympathy with their children in their pursuits. No, indeed. Interest yourself in their studies, look after their companions, and yourself prove their teachers. Do not put the work all upon one side If you have found the teachers faithless or imprudent, and words from you have been insufficient, withdraw the children from their care. If they have been proved the opposite, uphold them, and in any case so long as the child is under the teacher's care, strengthen the teacher's hands.

A teacher was once scolding a young girl for not handing her a required composition. "Mamma says I need not write them," was the reply, and as the teacher further urged the matter she brought the next morning a written excuse from that mother. Another young girl was reprimanded for an imperfect lesson. "I could not help it," she answered, "mamma made me come down stairs and see company all the evening."

Papers are filled with articles concerning the "girl of the period," describing her frivolity lack of solid education and love of fashion. Blame not the girl. They are born with good intellects, ambition and desire for knowledge, but it is the parents, alas, who are most at fault. While the girls are at school shut them out from general society. Let it be understood that Friday evening is their only spare evening. Let parties entirely alone. Said a school girl in my hearing: "I cannot go to-morrow evening because mamma says 'one party a week is enough." Enough! One too many. For two days before it is nearly the sole subject in the girl's thoughts, and the morning after she comes with flushed cheeks, excited eyes, with dance, music and gay dresses flitting through her brain, and of course no lessons; and the second is stupid and listless. How many a teacher's heart aches as she daily sees girls, lady-like and with good hearts, and all the elements of true hearted women becoming fault finding and foolish. We commenced with a plea for justice to the girls. However, one necessarily involves the other. A lady said a short time go, "I never allow my daughter to complain of her teachers at home. I think their work is sufficiently hard even with home co-operation. The same mother further said, "I could not allow her to go to such a party because it would break into her school." What is the result of such training? The young lady has a thorough English education, is a good French and German scholar and is making such a woman as will one day be an ornament to society and a pride to her sex.

Parents, especially mothers, think of these things, and while you are mourning over the inefficiency of teachers, and the lack of good schools carefully examine and see how far it lies in your power to remedy the evils of which you complain. Where there is one faithless teacher I think you can find, estimating it very low, ten faithless parents.

Encourage your children in work but not in complaining. Remember the teacher is responsible for but five hours of the twenty-four and you for the other nineteen. A father said to a teacher, "What is the use of your making the girls take home so many books? They never look in one." Do you not know, father, that is not the teachers fault? If she sees that the books are carried home it rests with you to see that they are used. The hardest cross any true teacher bears never comes from the pupils but is laid upon her shoulders by negligent and unsympathizing parents.

The Size of the Legislatures.

[From the Philadelphia Telegraph.]

If we were to have a convention for the revision of the Constitution—and the demand for one is so universal that it is scarcely probable the Legislature will adjourn without giving it heed—one of the most vital questions that will come before it for consideration will be that touching an increase in the membership of the Lower House. To show the comparative size of the legislative bodies of different States, with the average number of the most numerous branch, we have compiled the following table upon the basis of the recent census:

State.	Senate.	House.	Average Constituency
Maine	31	151	4,150
New Hampshire	12	333	950
Vermont	30	241	1,370
Massachusetts	40	240	6,070
Rhode Island	34	72	3,020
Connecticut	21	238	2,260
New Eng'd St's	168	1,275	2,735
New York	32	128	34,100
Pennsylvania	33	100	35,160
Ohio	37	105	25,825
Illinois	50	177	14,350
Missouri	34	200	8,575
New Jersey	21	60	15,100
California	40	80	7,015

New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri are, in their order as stated, the five most populous States in the Union, and it will be seen that, at present, the legislative constituencies of Pensylvania are larger than those of New York, and greatly in excess of those of the three other States named. The six New England States, with an aggregate population of 3,487,400, are divided altogether into 1,275 representative districts, with an average population of 2,735; while Pa. with a population of 3,515,993, or some twenty-eight thousand more than all New England, is divided into but one hundred districts, with an average population of about 35,160. The Senates of the New England States embrace in the aggregate 168 members, with an average constituency of 20,760, or but four-sevenths of the average constituency of members of the most numerous branch of the Legislature of this State. In New Hampshire the lower House has more members than in any other State in the Union, and the constituencies are consequently the smallest of all, numbering even less than a thousand. Massachusetts, with a House of 250 members, has an average constituency of 6,079, or but little more than one-sixth of the size of those in this State. The Illinois House of Representatives previous to the recent revision of the Constitution, numbered 90 members; and if the number had not been increased, the districts would have averaged a population of 28,220; but by the new Constitution the number of members have been increased to 177, and the size of the constituencies put down to 14,350.

Yates and Saulsbury.

A Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Mirror refers to the better characteristics of the Senators especially notorious for inebriety, in a manner at once charitable, tender and affecting:

With Senator Saulsbury will vanish one of the most memorable faces and forms of the Senate. On the Democratic side of the Senate he is the grand figure head, as Charles Sumner is on the Republican. Not to see Saulsbury with his hands deep in his pockets, glowering up and down behind the last tier of senatorial chairs, restive and defiant as a caged lion, but his pale, trim, temperate brother "Eli" in his seat will be to see a new senate. To look upon, he is a great leonine man, noble to behold, though he does chew tobacco and mock with strong drink. I have seen him on the street corner exchanging "chews" on terms of perfect hail fellow equality with one of the despised race, which he raged over the next day in the Senate as very little above that of the baboon. I have seen him empty his stomach in the gutter and then drop down and lie in it, and I have seen him one of the grandest looking of men, clad in faultless black and spotless linen, walking beside Mrs. Jefferson Davis on a fair June Sabbath (which her husband spent at Fortress Monroe) gallantly and devoutly carrying her prayer book to church. I have heard him recall to a friend by his side the days of his boyhood, when he and "Eli" played in the old barn and slept in one bed, and each told the other all his heart, each loved the other so much that they couldn't quarrel. And in this recital there were touches of a generous nature which told that God made this man, in the beginning, loving and noble. He stands more than six feet high, and is large in proportion. His head is covered with abundant black hair, just touched with silver. He has black eyes, and finely cut features, and, when he is himself, a most winning expression. In early life he studied for the Episcopal ministry, and even now, when he assumes the "white choker," as he often does, looks like one. With him and Richard Yates, on the 4th of March depart the last of the inebriate senators. There may be plenty of "drinkers" left, but no other "drunkards."

"Poor Dick Yates," as his brethern so often call him. Probably never did living man battle harder than he has done with an over-mastering appetite. An inherited one, born in his blood, no one not thus cursed can dream of the power of such a foe, nor judge by the right the sin of the soul that at last sinks vanquished. Brave, generous, and child-hearted—as the victim of the wine cup often is—Illinois loved this, her favorite son, loved him for himself and for all that he had done for his native state; trusted him, bore with him, trusted him again—even when through weakness of the will he oft betrayed her faith. How he struggled to be worthy of that trust in the highest legislative council of the nation, he only knows, and his God. But there came an hour when it was too late; when affection, intellect and will went down forever before the instiate foe, and Richard Yates, but the wreck of himself, to-day trembling in his seat, counts the days when his place will be filled by another.

An Omaha Story.

Yesterday's express train brought from the west an estray individual known as "Bill" Jenkins, a comely prepossessing youth of twenty-five summers and an extra winter. For years if not for days, "Bill" has hunted the bright-eyed gazelle, chased the antelope and "got away" with grizzlies. "Bill" is tall, slim, good looking and, had he not been possessed of an adventurous spirit, would probably have occupied, to-day, a high toned lucrative place among the leaders of the land. As it was, and is, he has only led bullwhackers, emigrants and occasionally stray redskins.

Twenty-two months ago, while doing the "heavy" in the hills of Nevada, he met with a party by the name of Wilkins, who was an official of the Territory. Wilkins for several weeks had been doing the agreeable to a young lady, the daughter of a wealthy miner who bore the euphonious title of Jones, but she smiled not sweetly upon him, neither did she display those captivating blandishments that charm the soul, but rather reflected the bright luster of her beautiful eyes upon Jenkins—the beloved and adored Jenkins.

The latter possessed her love, her all, and was therefore the declared visitor in this particular combat of Cupid's arrangements.

Wilkins became furious, jealous and on the 23d of April, A. D. 1869, accidentally meeting Jenkins in one of the business houses, deliberately pulled his "mountain howitzer" and perforated the corporosity of "Bill" in (as the latter expresses it,) a decidedly graceful manner.

The ball struck Jenkins in the right hip, and came out at the upper portion of the thigh, inside, Wilkins fled the country and joined a band of desperadoes. He was subsequently arrested as a mail robber and in attempting to make his escape received a visitation from Old Death, who sent the spirit of the ex-official to other realms.

Jenkins was confined to his bed for sixteen months, when he found himself sufficiently strong to travel.

Miss Jones had been a constant attendant upon him during his sickness and convalescence, and one month ago linked her fortune with his at Hymen's altar, and one week since the happy twain started on an extensive bridal tour. We interviewed them on the train and learn that they are about to visit New Orleans, the home of the happy bridegroom, where a grand reception has been prepared for the parties who have passed through so many trying vicissitudes.

"Bill" and his really pretty bride will return in May, and again take up their residence in Nevada, where we hope the ghost of the departed Wilkins will never interfere with their connubial felicitations.

From the Chicago Republican.

Dreadful Irreverence.

Garret Davis put himself to unnecessary trouble the other day, when he declared that he never subscribed to newspapers, cared nothing for what they said, and certainly never read them. It is well enough known that the absurd old Kentuckian is wholly unacquainted with the events of the present generation. His studies in modern history closed with the Resolutions of '98, and he has never been able to appreciate the lessons which the record of other times convey to less bigoted minds. He is an intellectual mummy, and has been too long kept above ground.

"Sturdy old Ben Wade" seems to have stood the voyage to Santo Domingo very well. According to all accounts, his stomach was undisturbed during the whole trip. He must have improved in a seafaring sense, since 1865. During the summer of that year he took a voyage down the coast to visit the South and improve his health. Before he had lost sight of Sandy Hook, however, he began to experience the nauseating horrors of the briny deep. Next morning a friend called at his state-room to inquire how he was enjoying himself. "Enjoying h—l!" growled the venerable statesman. "Is this what you call a pleasure-trip? The next time I want one, I'll stay at home and take a dose of ipecac." During the same voyage, on a windy afternoon, a lady of the party, happening to lose her veil overboard, rushed to Mr. Wade with the story of her trouble. She was astonished to find that the only consolation he was disposed to give was to advise her to "hang on to her teeth and hair, or they'd go next." She, however, attributed this want of gallantry to the pangs unutterable which sturdy old Ben. was suffering just then. We are glad to know that he wasn't sea-sick this time. It made it much more pleasant, not only for Mr. Wade himself, but for those who accompanied him.

Forty-First Congress.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE, Feb. 28.—The river and harbor bill was reported with amendments. The army appropriation bill came up and was amended, and discussed until adjournment.

HOUSE.—The vote whereby the Omnibus appropriation bill was defeated, was reconsidered and a substitute, with appropriations for new works omited, was passed. A bill to promote the construction of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad was passed. A bill passed to protect peaceable citizens in the South. The Senate amendment to the House bill for celebrating the 100th year of American Independence, at Philadelphia, was concurred in, and the bill passed.

SENATE, Feb. 27—A resolution was passed to pay the Georgia Senators. The balance of the day was chiefly taken up in "chaffering" about personal matters, referring to Ku Klux testimony before the investigating committee, having been given to the N. Y. Tribune reporter for publication, before the Committee reported.

HOUSE.—The Senate amendments to the Legislative appropriation bill, and the Indian appropriation bill, were not concurred in, and a committee of conference asked. The Omnibus appropriation bill was considered at great length, and finally passed. Adjourned.

SENATE, March 1.—A resolution calling for a detailed statement of accounts between the United States and the Union Pacific R. R. Co., was offered. The resolution to continue the investigation of Ku Klux outrages, gave rise to an animated debate, but was finally carried. The Army appropriation bill, after some debate, finally passed. The Naval appropriation bill was then taken up, and after disposing of 28 pages, the Senate went into Executive Session and then adjourned.

HOUSE.—The Senate bill providing that no tax shall be imposed upon any undistributed sums added to the contingent fund of Insurance companies, or on unearned premiums passed. A number of bills, of a private character, passed. The report of the Conference Committee on the Indian appropriation bill, was agreed to. Adjourned.

SENATE, March 2.—The Committee of Conference on the Legislative, Judicial and Executive appropriation bill could not agree, and were discharged. New Committees were appointed. The Deficiency bill was discussed and amended, and passed. Also, a bill authorizing a suit to be commenced to recover the value of the U. S. Ship Oneida, and of her armament.

HOUSE.—A bill was discussed and passed establishing a Court, composed of three Commissioners, to adjudicate the claims of loyal citizens of the late rebel States, for stores or supplies taken or furnished during the rebellion for the army, &c. The Army and Navy appropriation bill were non-concurred in, and a Committee of Conference asked. A resolution acquitting Gen. Howard of the charges against him relative to the management of the Freedmen's Bureau, and eulogistic of the character of that officer, passed by a party vote. The Legislature appropriation bill was discussed at great length; and a new Conference Committee appointed. Adjourned.

SENATE, March 3.—A bill to provide for the reissue of National Bank notes, and for the reception by the Treasury of mutilated notes of National Banks, and the reissue in their place of new ones, passed. A bill limiting the cost of cable dispatches, of ten words, to $5 in gold, passed. A new Committee of conference was appointed on the bill to abolish the rank of Admiral and Vice Admiral in the Navy. A number of pension bills were passed. The Southern Pacific Railroad bill passed. The Cincinnati Bridge was ordered to have 100 feet under span at low water mark; and authorizes the courts to determine whether it has been constructed according to law. The Senate concurred in the House amendment to the appropriation bill, relative to the claims of Southern loyal citizens.

HOUSE.—The bill to permit animals imported for breeding purposes, free of duty, passed. The Senate amendments to the House bill relative to the telegraphic communication with foreign countries was concurred in. The report of the Conference Committee on the Fortification Appropriation bill was agreed to. The bill to amend the patent laws passed. A resolution complimentary to Speaker Blaine was passed. The bill for the reduction of coper coin passed.

SENATE, March 4.—The question of repealing the tariff on coal was discussed till 5 o'clock in the morning, when a resolution passed complimenting the Vice President. The hour of adjournment having arrived, Mr. Colfax returned his thanks to the Senate for their compliment to him, and declared the session of the Senate for the Forty-First Congress adjourned without day. The hour—12 m.—having arrived, the Secretary of the Senate called the roll of Senators elect for the XLII Congress, who came forward and took the oath of office. The names of Alcorn, of Mississippi; Clayton, of Arkansas, and Vance, of North Carolina, were not called. The subject of contested seats was laid over temporally.

HOUSE.—Quite a storm of words occurred on a motion to amend the rules, which was defeated. The Senate amendments to the Omnibus appropriation bill passed. The Speaker made his valedictory; when, after a short pause, the Clerk, Mr. McPherson, summoned the new House to order, and proceeded to call the names of members by States, and 222 members answered to their names; 243 being the full representation. Mr. Rogers, of North Carolina; was, at his own request, omitted in the roll call. The Arkansas members were not called, their certificates of election being informal. Mr. Blaine was re-elected Speaker, and made his acknowledgments. There were some motions relative to contested elections; after which the House proceeded to elect the old officers of the House. The delegates from Territories were then called and sworn in.

HENRY T. HELMBOLD'S

COMPOUND FLUID

Extract Catawba

GRAPE PILLS.

Component Parts—Fluid Extract Rhubarb and Fluid Extract Catawba Grape Juice.

For Liver Complaints, Jaundice, Bilious Affections, Sick or Nervous Headache, Costiveness, etc. Purely vegetable, containing no Mercury, Minerals or Deleterious Drugs.

H

These pills are the most delightful pleasant purgative, superseding castor oil, salts, magnesia, etc. They are composed of the finest ingredients. After a few days' use of them, such an invigoration of the entire system takes place as to appear miraculous to the weak and enervated, whether arising from imprudence or disease. H. T. Helmbold's Compound Fluid Extract Catawba Grape Pills are not sugar-coated, from the fact that sugar-coated Pills do not dissolve, but pass through the stomach without dissolving, consequently do not produce the desired effect. THE CATAWBA GRAPE PILLS, being pleasant in taste and odor, do not necessitate their being sugar-coated. FIFTY CENTS PER BOX.

E

HIGHLY CONCENTRATED COMPOUND

FLUID EXTRACT. SARSAPARILLA

Will radically exterminate from the system Scrofula, Syphilis, Fever Sores, Ulcers, Sore Eyes, Sore Legs, Sore Mouth, Sore Head, Bronchitis, Skin Diseases, Salt Rheum, Cankers, Runnings from the Ear, White Swellings, Tumors, Cancerous Affections, Nodes, Rickets, Glandular Swellings, Night Sweats, Rash, Tetter, Humors of all kinds, Chronic Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, and all diseases that have been established in the system for years.

L

Being prepared expressly for the above Complaints, its blood-purifying properties are greater than any other preparation of sarsaparilla. It gives the complexion a clear and healthy color and restores the patient to a state of health and purity. For purifying the blood, removing all chronic constitutional diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, and the only reliable and effectual known remedy for the cure of pains and swelling of the bones, ulcerations of the throat and legs, blotches, pimples on the face, erysipelas, and all scaly eruptions of the skin, and beautifying the complexion. PRICE $1 50 PER BOTTLE.

M

HENRY T. HELMBOL'S
CONCENTRATED

FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU.

THE GREAT DIURETIC,

has cured every case of Diabetes in which it has been given, Irritation of the Neck of the Bladder and Inflammation of the Kidneys, Ulceration of the Kidneys and Bladder, Retention of Urine, Diseases of the Postage Gland, Stone in the Bladder, Calculus, Gravel, Brickdust Deposit, and Mucous or Milky Discharges, and for enfeebled and delicate constitutions of both sexes, attended with the following symptoms: Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Horror of Disease, Wakefulness, Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruption on the Face, Pallid Countenance, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, etc.

Used by persons from the age of eighteen to twenty-five, and from thirty-five to fifty-five or in the decline or change of life; after confinement or labor pains; bed-wetting in children.

B

Helmbold's Extract Buchu is Diuretic and Blood-Purifying, and cures all diseases arising from Habits of Dissipation, and excesses and imprudences in life, Impurities of the Blood, etc., Superseding Copaiba in Affections for which it is used, and Syphilitic Affections—in these diseases used in connection with Helmbold's Rose Wash.

LADIES.

In many affections peculiar to ladies, the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy—as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness or Suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrus state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation. It is prescribed extensively by the most eminent physicians & midwives for enfeebled and delicate constitutions, of both sexes and all ages (attended with any of the above diseases or symptoms.)

in all their stages, at little expense, little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure. It causes a frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, Allaying Pain and Inflamation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous matter.

Thousands who have been the victims of incompetent persons, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they have been deceived, and that the "Poison" has, by the use of "powerful astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in a more aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and Diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. PRICE ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS PER BOTTEE.

HENRY T. HELMBOLD'S IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

cannot be surpassed as a FACE WASH, and will be found the only specific remedy in every species of Cutaneous Affection. It speedily eradicates Pimples, Spots, Scorbutic Dryness, Indurations of the Cutaneous Membrane, etc., dispels Redness and Incipient Inflamation, Hives Rash, Moth Patches, Dryness of Skalp or Skin, Frost Bites, and all purposes for which Salves or Ointments are used; restores the skin to a state of purity and softness, and insures continued healthy action to the tissue of its vessels, on which depends the agreeable clearness and vivacity of complexion so much sought and admired. But however valuable as a remedy for existing defects of the skin, H. T. Hembold's Rose Wash has long sustained its principle claim to unbound patronage, by possessing qualities which render it a toilet appendage of the most Superlative and Congenial character, combining in an elegant formula those prominent requisites safety and efficacy—the invariable accompaniments of its use—as a Preservative and Refresher of the Complexion. It is an excellent Lotion for diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an injection for diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the EXTRACTS BUCHU, SARSAPARILLA, AND CATAWBA GRAPE PILLS, in such diseases as recommended, cannot be surpassed. PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

NOISELESS AND BOLTLESS.—Read without fail Geer & Cady's advertisement in another column, and write them at Marshall, Michigan. jan11;1y.

"In like a Lamb and out like a Lion."—There is an old saying that if March comes in like a lamb it will be sure to go out like a lion, and vice versa. As last Wednesday (March 1st) proved to be a clear, pleasant lamb-like day, we may therefore conclude that the month will end in weather having a fierce, lion-like aspect. We wouldn't advise any one however to bet their pile on this. Weather, like a young lady, is very fickle.

Dissolved.—The Messrs. Bruin, who have been conducting a barber shop in the Quay building in Beaver, have dissolved their partnership, the elder Bruin retiring. John can be found at the old stand, ready and willing to attend to the wants of all who will favor him with a call.

It is rumored that the P., Ft. W. & C. R. R. Company will erect a rolling mill at Leetonia this summer, which will be used exclusively for the manufacture of railroad iron for the use of the company.

A Bold Robbery.—On last Friday evening at about 9½ p. m., while a lot of small boys were standing around the show window of Mr. Brehm, jeweler, &c. of Bridgewater, a strange man came along, and dashing his hands through one of the panes of glass, he seized a bronze deer on which a gold watch and some jewelry were hanging and immediately made off in a great hurry with his booty. The alarm was given at once, and a chase began. The thief thinking that he would be overtaken dropped the deer, and then the watch, but succeeded in getting away with the finger and ear-rings which unfortunately came into his hands. Who he was or whence he came is at present unknown. We trust an effort will be made to find him out, so that suitable boarding and lodging accommodations may be provided for him in Allegheny city.

WELL PATRONIZED. — Notwithstanding that of late frequent complaints about the depression of business, we notice considerable activity at the well-known Clothing Store of S. & J. Snellenburg. The firm have such an excellent stock of piece goods, as well as ready made clothing, and are so particular to please, that they at all times enjoy a fair trade. There is nothing in the clothing line for gentlemen that cannot be had at this establishment, and satisfaction is guaranteed both in the matter of quality and price. The best cutter is employed, and every article is gotten up in the latest style, so that the most fastidious cannot be disappointed. The furnishing department is stocked with everything in that line needed by gentlemen, all the latest novelties being promptly received.

Public Sales.—From bills printed at the ARGUS office, we learn that John Roberts, esq., of Brighton township will have a sale of personal property at his residence in that township on the 23d day of March at 10 a. m. Horses, cows, hogs, farming implements, &c., &c., will be disposed of at that time. A credit of six months will be given on all sales over ten dollars.

Mr. J. J. Hortter of New Brighton has also had bills printed at this office, announcing a public sale of groceries, &c., at that place on the 13th of this month.

Mr. William E. Hice, of Hanover tp., also makes known, through bills printed at the ARGUS Job office, that he will have a public sale of personal property on the 23d of this month. Persons on the south side of the river, should make it suit to attend the sale.

Rev. J. I. Frazier, a U. P. minister, and for some time past a resident of Beaver, has been called upon to take charge of a congregation at Beaver Falls, this county. Mr. F., will take up his residence in that place in a short time. During Mr. Frazier's abode in our midst, he has succeeded in making many friends here, who earnestly hope that himself, and his amiable lady, will find their new home a pleasant one, and their means of doing good immeasurably enhanced.

ONE CAR of Canton City flour, one car of Ætna flour, 10 hogshead choice New Orleans sugar, 20 barrels New Orleans molasses, 250 kegs Wheeling nails, a fine lot of carpet chain in all colors, fine batting and a lot of Cleveland white lime, received and for sale wholesale and retail. Also, cloverseed and grain bought and sold, for cash, at Speyerer & Sons, Rochester, Pa.

Arrest of an Alleged Seducer.—On Saturday Miss Isabella Reed, of Allegheny, related to Mayor Callow a seven years' history which, though strange in many particulars, bears the impress of truth. This young woman, who is not yet twenty-six years old, and still carries in her features the traces of former beauty, says that early in the spring of 1862, she was introduced by a mutual friend to Mr. David Stewart, of Freedom, Beaver county, in this State. It seems that on both sides there was an admiration that rapidly deepened into love. This, however, was the unwise love that inevitably brings sorrow, for, says Miss Reed, Stewart accomplished her ruin by force. She was loth to bring him within the pale of the law, and as he still clung to her with all the tenacity of the earlier and less harmful passion, the matter was passed by. Mr. Stewart retained his hold on the girl's affections, and though no marriage ceremony had been performed he continued to cohabit with her until the summer of 1860, when, as the lady alleges, he deserted her, went to New York, and there entered into an espousal of a young girl of high connections and considerable wealth. Miss Reed then took up her residence in Akron, and there remained until she heard of the alliance into which Mr. Stewart was about to enter. She then took another view of the case and being determined to resort to law, made an information before Mayor Callow, embodying the facts given above. The warrant for Mr. Stewart's arrest was issued, and upon it that gentleman was taken into custody. He desired to give bail, and before 'Squire Kerr, of Freedom, he entered into bonds of $2,000 to appear Wednesday next for a hearing. It is stated, with how much truth we know not, that Mr. Stewart has offered to make the girl every reparation in his power.—Pittsburgh Post, Feb. 27.

WALL PAPER! WALL PAPER!! WALL PAPER!!!—25,000 bolts of Wall Paper, all of the latest patterns, at B. Mulheim's.

CITY BOTTLING HOUSE.—The attention of our readers is called to the card in to-day's paper of Messrs. J. C. Buffum & Co., Bottlers, Pittsburgh. Mr. Buffum the senior of the firm, is the oldest Bottler West of the Mountains. They will keep on hand for immediate shipment, a large stock of Sarsaparilla, Mineral and Raspberry Soda Waters, also for medical and family use in bottles, Smith's Kennet, Wainright's and all the best brands of ales and London Porter. Give them a call.

The New Orleans Picayune tells the story of a printer, who when his fellow-workmen went out to drink beer, during the working hours, put in bank the exact amount which he would have spent if he had gone out to drink. He kept to this resolution for five years. He then examined his bank account and found that he had on deposit $521 86. In the five years he had not lost a day from ill-health. Three out of five of his fellow-workmen, had, in the meantime, become drunkards, were worthless as workmen, and were discharged. The water-drinker then bought out the printing office, went on enlarging his business, and in twenty years from the time he began to put by his money, was worth $100,000. The story, whether new or old, teaches a lesson which every young mechanic should lay to heart.

Marriage Licenses.—Mr. Rutan introduced a bill in the Senate a few days ago, regulating marriages and protecting clergymen and justices of the peace performing marriage ceremonies, providing that it shall be the duty of clergymen or magistrates to require a license from the Clerk of Orphans' Court of the county in which the marriage is proposed, which parties shall procure at a fee of one dollar. After the ceremony, the license shall be returned to the Clerk within thirty days, with an endorsement embracing the date of marriage, name of the party performing the ceremony, with the names of the witnesses present. The Clerk shall not grant license unless the parties are legally entitled thereto, or the parents or guardians apply, and when the application is doubtful the Clerk shall administer the oaths and examine the witnesses, and he shall keep a record of all applications and cases; for negligence or violation of the law, the Clerk or other persons may be fined one thousand dollars. The license shall release the clergyman or magistrate from all responsibility.

Harrisburg Morals. — The State Journal of March 1st says:

Every sober man in the land knows that there is too much drunkenness—too much misery, imposed by those who make and drink intoxicating liquors upon others. These are facts which no one disputes, they are painful, disgraceful, and debasing, and for some reason the community at large is not moved by their existence. But on Sunday afternoon, a sight was presented, on Second street, which, in all respects, was heart-rending and horrible as an exhibition of drunken degradation. Two youths, neither over eighteen years of age, staggered along that thoroughfare, completely and fearfully intoxicated. Where did those boys get the liquor which intoxicated them? Who sold the poison on Sunday? These are questions well worthy the investigation of our detective police. It is bad enough to give liquor to minors at any time, but to send them forth to reel along our streets on the holy Sabbath is a spectacle of atrocity which no community should allow without making an effort to detect the guilty parties. The law is plain on the subject of selling liquor to minors, it is clear as to selling on Sunday, and the man who violates it in this respect is unfit to be recognized anywhere with decent consideration.

CARPETS! CARPETS!! CARPETS!!!—A very large stock of the most desirable patterns of Carpets, as cheap as the cheapest, at B. Mulheim's, Bridgewater.

Miss Hattie Oliver, for some months past a visitor in our city, was married by Bishop Domnec, at the Episcopal Residence in Pittsburgh, assisted by Rev. Father Devlin and Rev. Father Grace, on the 21st inst. Mr. Gilbert Rafferty is the happy man—and the couple have the best wishes of many friends hereabouts for a long life of contentment.—Monongahela Republican.

The bride here referred to was for some time a pupil in Prof. Taylor's school in this place, and we believe she is a graduate of that institution.

NEW WAGON FOR SALE.—A splendid new two-horse wagon with the celebrated cast spindles, and completely finished in the latest and best style. Only $100. Parties finding themselves in want of a new wagon will find it to their interest by purchasing. Inquire of Geo. P. Smith, corner of Brighton street and the public square, Rochester, Pa. mar8;3t

College Thieving.—It seems that even our Colleges have thieves within their walls. A Mr. Monroe, a student at the Alliance College claims to have been robbed on Monday night of last week at the college boarding house, of fifty dollars in money and a note calling for one hundred dollars. He accuses his room-mate, a Mr. Kent, of committing the theft. On the other hand Kent claims to have lost a watch and some six or seven dollars. An examination was had at the college hall, but nothing elicited that would point to where the money and effects went. On Wednesday forenoon the pocket books were picked up near the house, by one of the lady boarders, the money abstracted, but the note was left in the book.

Adjourned.—The sale of the "Dunlap Property"—D. Reisinger, agent,—has been adjourned till Saturday, March 18th, at 2 p. m. See advertisement in another column.

For "Black Horse" run in the county commissioners' advertisement for sealed proposals from bridge builders, read Block House Run.

Attempt at Housebreaking.—We learn that on Wednesday night last a bold attempt was made to enter the dwelling of Thomas Bartilson, esq., in Hopewell township. Mr. B. was in this place at the time having been subpoenaed as a witness in the Brown murder case. It fortunately happened, however, that a young man named Elias Adams, employed by Mr. Bartilson, was staying with the family. There were two of the robbers and their first attempt was to open the door of the dwelling by forcing the lock. Failing in this they seized upon a broad-axe which happened to be lying upon the porch and endeavored to pry the door open. This aroused the family and young Adams seized a gun, went to the front window, and endeavored to discharge it, but the weapon failed to go off. He then proceeded down stairs and made another effort to shoot, which was this time successful, the shot penetrating through the door. The robbers fled, and an investigation showed spots of blood on the porch, indicating that some of the shots had taken effect. No clue to the parties has yet been discovered.—Washington Reporter.

The Ohio Legislature has a bill before the House limiting the charges for seats or berths in palace, sleeping or dining-room cars. The rates fixed is for a single chair, berth or sofa for twenty-four hours, one dollar, for a section one dollar and fifty cents; and for a state-room two dollars.

Seminary Society.—At the meeting of this society last week, the young ladies and others discussed the question: "Resolved, that circumstances make the man." Misses Bescom, Roberts, Harrah, Richardson and Atkins, read very creditable essays on the subject; which was followed by speeches from several gentlemen. Miss Hunter read an interesting and amusing paper. The exercises were interspersed with music—both vocal and instrumental—by the pupils. We were much pleased with the spirited singing on the occasion; especially that of the classes. Prof. Beuter played, by request, a couple of pieces in his inimitable manner. These weekly meetings are very pleasant for invited guests, and must be highly improving to the young ladies and gentlemen who participate in them. We understand the school is preparing to give an entertainment for the public—at the close of this term—the 23d of this month.

We have received two communications—one from New Brighton, and the other from Glenn Arbor, Beaver county, in reply to K. K. K. in the last Radical; both too late for this paper. They will appear in our next.

OIL CLOTHS AND WINDOW SHADES, in a large variety, at B. Mulheim's.

Killed by the Cars.—A young woman whose name was Crawford, and residing near Clinton, Lawrence county, was killed last week by a train of freight cars striking and running over her.

B. Mulheim.—Success is almost sure to come to those who merit it. There are many dealers in the borough of Bridgewater who conduct business in an honorable way; and who, by strict attention to the wants and necessities of the people, and a judicious method of purchasing and selling at reduced prices, have proved themselves eminently worthy of success, and the liberal patronage they receive. Prominent among this class, we may point to the gentleman whose name heads this article. By unwearied application, courteous demeanor, and a great variety of excellent goods in his line, Mr. Mulheim has established a reputation and a trade of which any merchant might be envious. His new stock of carpets, wall-paper, stationary, &c., is unprecedentedly large, well selected and cheap. Now is the time to prepare for spring renovation in refitting your houses, and Mulheim's, Bridgewater, just the place to purchase.

Whatever may be said of the merits or demerits of Miss Hindman's lecture, delivered in the M. E. Church of Beaver, on last Friday evening, all will agree that she drew a larger crowd of people, than any of the five gentlemen lecturers who preceded her.

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio, Feb. 24th 1871.

EDITOR ARGUS:—While roads are muddy and business dull, I will give you a few local items that may be of interest to some of your readers:

Since writing my last letter to the ARGUS, there has been a raid made on the "whisky ring" of this place. There have been about a dozen suits began against grocers and parties owning property that was occupied for "whisky saloons." One Mike Donald had a hearing before the mayor on Tuesday last, and fined $2,00 and cost of prosecution, and he will have another trial to-morrow for another offense, where in $3,00 damages are claimed. Damages claimed by other parties run up as high as ten, twelve, and fifteen hundred dollars. In every case the ladies are the prosecutors. Able counsel have volunteered their services, the community are very much excited over the matter and hardly anything else can be talked about. A few cases were began some time since, but were dropped or compromised for want of sufficient funds to prosecute. But the "Good Templars" of the place kindly took the matter in hand, and furnished means and counsel, free of charge to those innocent women, who were compelled to see their husbands robbed from day to day of their hard earnings.

Two men were sent to the "Penitentiary" from this place, some two weeks since for burglary. It was whisky that caused them to err, "as it does all men who drink it." Their families are now left to the public to be cared for; one of the broken hearted women has taken an action in Court for $15,000 damages against the one that furnished her husband with drink, and there is not a reasonable doubt but that she will recover the full amount claimed. We think before long that instead of twenty-eight doggeries in our town, they will be numbered with the things that were.

The old saying that, "there is many a slip between the cup and lip," was brought to my mind a few days since, the circumstances are about as follows: A young couple appeared before Esq. Fraxwell, (who lives about three miles from this place), a few days since and wished to be "made one" on short notice, whereupon the Esq. after carefully surveying the licence, to see that all was right proceeded to unite them in the holy bands of matrimony. He proceeded until he came to that part of the ritual, "Do you promise to honor and obey your husband and that"—"Hold on Squire," said the lady," please read that part over again; whereupon the Squire again read until he came to the "honor and obey," when the lady interrupted by exclaiming, "No by thunder not by a jug-full," the youth looked in astonishment; first at the lady then at the Justice, and soon they took their departure without giving the Squire a marriage fee.

There have been several foot races here within the last few months. A lively boy from Pittsburgh finally carried away the belt.

Harmon Ebersole gave two young men a complete horse-whipping, a few days ago, on the street, for over driving one of his livery teams.

WYANDOT.

EDITOR ARGUS.—In the Radical of the 24th ult., we noticed a communication, headed, "Our Nation and its capability "of supporting itself," and subscribed by one "J. H. C." Who "J. H. C." is, or where he lives, or what he does, does not appear. But that he will not long remain "A youth to fortune and to fame unknown," seems evident. His production has evidently been prepared with great care, and now that he sees it in print, he doubtless thinks he has reached "the top of manhood's expectations."

Had a friend not called our attention to this most wonderful production, we might not have had the pleasure of its perusal. The very first sentence struck us as entirely original. We confess that to us, "the eye of intellectual reason" is new. What kind of reason is "intellectual reason?" Perhaps the illustrious father of the thought as he "towers above "the surrounding world in his princely "magnificence" can tell, for he, doubtless, has looked into her "eye."

And, then, who ever heard of the howl of a savage being a ravishing sound? If we recollect aright, the word as used by our unknown friend means to delight, to rapture, or to transport with delight: but it would seem that when "this Republic was clothed with the garments of financial and domestic poverty," the howl of the savage ravished its ear. What bad musical taste that "little Republic," must have had before "the great crisis of its history." Surely those "garments of financial and domestic poverty" must have blown over its head and dulled its ear, so that it was prevented from drinking in the concord of sweet sounds as they floated on the air. Truly "music hath charms," but we never before knew that savage howls were classed among these charms. However we suppose it is on the same principle that

> "The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark,
> When neither is attended: and I think
> The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
> When every goose is cackling, would be thought
> A better musician than the wren."

What a dark, doleful time it must have been to "the now born Republic," when the "chords" (musical chords, we suppose,) which had "bound it to its mother country had been severed, and the hideous form of bankruptcy flapped its raven wings of demand" over its devoted head. Perhaps 'twas then those savage yells greeted the ear of the "emaciated, and almost annihilated little Republic," causing her to think any sound more ravishing than the flapping of those dreadful wings.

Having viewed this republic in its infancy, and having told of that fearful struggle "which spread the veil of despair over every loyal heart, and shook the monumental structure of our liberty to the very centre" (in which occurs a sentence of thirty-seven lines—longer than any we ever saw—even in "Pollock's Course of Time,") our author (for of course he is one now, and will have no peace until he writes a book on Political Economy) propounds the startling question, "Are we able to support ourselves now and in the future?" He then proceeds to say that "reason tells us that the guiding star to all national greatness and durability is the code of laws by which the nation is governed—and going to the colossal structure of the American Republic we find escribed upon its key arch (may be he meant inscribed on its key stone) the wholesomest (probably the most wholesome would have been more like it) code of laws that ever received national life through legislative breathing, when glittering hosts bestud the sky." Would that we could behold the dazzling beauty of that star! O, that he had but told us where we might find that glorious "key arch," whereon are "escribed" such superlatively wholesome laws! But alas for us and for posterity the secret is his, and he alone may visit the sacred place where it is hidden from the gaze of "the common herd," and with "the eye of intellectual reason may peruse the wondrous things "escribed" thereon. There, too, he can listen to the deep breathing of that great legislative body, inspiring with "national life" that great code of most wholesome laws. Of course by this the Pennsylvania Legislature is not meant, for tis said its breath "is rank and smells to heaven," so that by no possibility could our new political economist contemplate the beauties of that "key arch" with the least degree of comfort.

Our author then takes "the wings of morning" and soars "to the zenith of the literary sky," and in passing through the boundless realms of space, heralding the glad harbinger of liberty over the world, shakes "the hand of friendship with all the nations within the bounds of civilization," glances at "education, one of the greatest blessings that everbefell mankind," (we thought befall usually denoted ill,) he, at last, alights in an "earthly garden of paradise in the literary world." We presume he feared if he should use the word paradise without qualifying it with earthly, some one might mistake the location. After such an exhaustive flight one might suppose our author would feel like lingering for a time at least amid the beauties of his "earthly paradise," bathing his weary limbs in its crystal streams, and resting beneath the shade of its never fading trees. But not so, for, after demonstrating "our capability to support ourselves in a moral sense of the word," he again plumes his untiring wings, leaves the sweet pleasures of his "earthly paradise," and onward takes his flight to the tropical regions of gold and diamonds, shouting exultation and defiance to the surrounding world, as he passes along. He then leaves the glittering sands of South America, and flying o'er the stormy Gulf, and revisits once more his own loved land, only stopping to rest beside the grand "key arch" to listen with the ear of imagination to the "click of the machinery" of that wonderful legislative body that once "breathed national life into a great code of laws," but is now engaged in forging a great national key to unlock the mighty vaults of the snow capped mountains of the west. What a wondrous key! The keys in the apocalyptical vision, the lamp of Aladdin, the great "key arch," and the things that are written thereon, all sink into utter insignificance.

> O, "J. H. C."!
> O, wondrous key!

When that illustrious day shall dawn, when those ponderous doors shall be unlocked, "may we be there to see."

Again our author, after causing the voice of prosperity to echo from the villages and "hamlets" of the north and east, as wealth comes thundering down the mountain side, throws that wealth into the "commercial atmosphere, thereby "setting the great wheels of American commerce in motion—until its sails can be seen to float on every commercial sea." How setting the wheels of commerce in motion will cause us to see its sails, we fail to perceive. But we do not possess "the eye of intellectual reason," or we could not only understand this, but his meaning when he says "the corpse of American energy and enterprise have been unshrouded (a corpse have been unshrouded) by the hand of science, and its untabernacled soul as the Godess of Liberty have been the guiding star to American achievement." O, unshrouded corpse! O, untabernacled soul! O, consistent author! We were at first taught that reason tells us that "the guiding star to all national greatness and durability is the code of laws by which the nation is governed. Who is this, then, that after such a proud boast, now makes an "unshrouded corpse," an untabernacled soul," the guiding star to American achievements? That corpse, if 'twere to revisit the "pale glimpses of the moon," might speak his name. We know him not.

Our author, after a long sentence occupying some twenty lines, introduces the shade of Daniel Webster, who, in deep, sepulchral tones, declares that "our obligations sink into pompous nothing." The great statesman must have been looking through "the eye of intellectual reason" when he uttered those words in relation to our present national debt. We, of the present generation, when we look at it with half an eye, think that debt of over two billions more than "a pompous nothing;" and if Daniel hadn't been a ghost when he said that, we feel assured he never would have made such an assertion. We are disposed to think that the sooner that imaginary legislature, that sits in solemn conclave under the shadow of the "key arch," forges that key, unlocks the vaults of those mighty mountains, and astonishes the eyes of mankind with the wealth with which they abound, the better it will be for us.

But we must hasten to a close. We would like to take a look with our political economist at the mighty conflagration which is to envelop the structure of British aristocracy. We would like to search among the ashes for the singed lion of British monarchy as he crouches before the eagle of American liberty. We would like to go with him to that grand volcanic mausoleum of South American Republics, and help him plant the glorious stars and stripes thereon. We should love to ascend with him the mountain tops and "cry to the inhabitants of the valley that liberty reigns, and that > "The star spangled banner in triumph doth wave, > O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

but time forbids. We part company with him with no little reluctance.—We have traveled thus far with him, because we wanted to do him good. When we saw his piece, we said to ourself, here is a genius, let us bring him into notice. He was not "born to blush unseen," let us show forth his beauties and his graces. Some day when he has reached the topmost rounds of fame's high ladder, he will thank us for remembering him, and encouraging his first efforts. But we fear not.

> "For 'tis a common proof
> That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
> Whereto the climber-upwards turns his face;
> But when he once attains the topmost round,
> He then unto the ladder turns his back,
> Looks in the clouds, scorning the low degrees
> By which he did ascend."

Penn'a. Legislature.

SENATE, Feb. 27.—Mr. Buckalew made a report on public printing, in which he showed by figures that the State Treasury had been fleeced of a considerable amount of money during the last ten years. He reported a bill regulating the public printing. Among the bills introduced were: One to pay for publishing the military history of Pennsylvania, five volumes at $4.00 per copy, 5,000 copies of each, twenty-five thousand copies in all—amounting to $100,000. Also, a bill to repeal the section of the fee bill which gives $3 attorney fee in judgments under $100. Also, a bill to collect mineral statistics; and one to establish a ferry over the Ohio river at Showstown; and one authorizing an additional tax of three mills for school purposes in McKeesport, authorizing Peeble's sub-school district of Pittsburgh to borrow $28,000, supplement for the Pittsburgh Gas Co., which authorizes voting by proxy. Incorporating Home Savings Bank of Pittsburgh, principal corporators H. Brady Wilkins, James McAuley and George Wilson.

HOUSE.—The House met at half-past 7 p. m., the special order being the Constitutional Convention Bill, and speeches were made before crowded lobbies. The bill was sustained by the Republicans and opposed by the Democrats, the difficulty being in the basis of representation, whether upon the apportionment of '64 or '71. The discussion continued until a late hour, when the bill passed finally. Adjourned.

SENATE, Feb. 28.—Petitions were presented on various subjects. A communication was read from the Governor giving the opinion of the Attorney General, that the Legislature has the right to repeal the charters of Railroads and Canals when their Boards of Corporators exact such high rates of toll on coal as to work an injury to citizens of the State. A thousand copies of the opinion were ordered printed. A motion was made to refer the message and Attorney General's opinion to the Judiciary Committee, with power to send for persons and papers. Mr. Billingfelt moved an amendment, that they be referred to a special committee of five, with the same powers. On this last motion a lengthy debate occurred; the amendment was lost, and the original motion prevailed. Adjourned.

HOUSE.—The petition of 1,000 citizens of Montour county for a law regulating toll on coal. Several others, very numerously signed, of a similar import, were also presented. Some discussion on the subject was had, but without definite action. A number of local bills passed; but none of interest to our readers. The Senate resolution opposing the granting by the General Government, of land subsidies to railroads, passed almost unanimously. Adjourned.

SENATE, March 1.—The supplement to the bill allowing the York & Wrightsville Railroad Co., to sell to the Pa. R. R. Co., and allowing the latter to issue new shares of stock thereon, passed. Also a similar bill to allow the W. Pa. R. R. Co. to sell to Pa. R. R. Co., and allowing the latter to issue new stock thereon, passed. The Finance Committee reported against selling the nine millions Sinking Fund; but recommended that the Governor be allowed to receive bids for the same, and report to the next Legislature. They also reported negatively the bill to sell the surplus funds to pay State debt, which, after debate, was recommitted.

HOUSE.—A new coal bill was introduced. The local option liquor law, after considerable debate, passed to a second reading without amendment.

SENATE, March 2.—A communication from the managers of the Western House of Refuge, notifying the Senate of the defalcation and absconding of Ringwalt Secretary of Board was received. A communication received from the President of the Workingmens' Beneficial Association of New York, urging legislation against the exorbitant charges by coal carrying companies. Some discussion was had relative to extending the law for the protection of anthracite coal miners; Mr. Rutan thought it not necessary for his region. The bill was laid over.

HOUSE.—The Treasury bill awarding State deposits to the highest bidders, was discussed most of the day. A number of local and private bills passed. Adjourned.

SENATE, March 3.—The apportionment bill, reported from committee and made the special order for Tuesday afternoon, provides that until the next septennial enumeration, there shall be 33 Senators and 100 Representatives. Beaver, Butler and Lawrence compose a Senatorial district; and Beaver county forms a Representative district—one member. Political figures from this bill give 17 Democrats to 16 Republicans in the Senate, and 51 Dem. to 49 Rep. in the House. It will not pass the House in its present shape. The joint resolution relative to the centennial anniversary at Philadelphia, making the Commission consist of the Governor, Speakers and three members of each House, passed. The Governor recommends the enlargement of the Penitentiaries.

HOUSE.—The annual appropriation bill was reported, amounting in the aggregate to $3,531,059. Many local bills passed, but uninteresting to Beaver citizens.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, March 2, 1870.

THE WEATHER.

The first Spring month opens with clear, warm, delightful weather. It is like May in the Northern States. The buds are swelling; and we may soon expect to see—in the parks and along the streets and avenues of the National Capitol—the trees in leaf. But with this —only forty-eight hours in which to finish the arduous and important work of its last session—no sunshine, rain or sleet, seem to have the least effect. The minor bills, or bills only interesting to private individuals, are made to give way to those of national importance.

BUSY CONGRESS,

THE NEW MEMBERS

of the Forty-Second Congress have nearly all arrived, and are critically surveying the ground on which they will shortly tread, and the prospect is for an active session, lasting until May.

CITY POSTAL WAGON.

The P. O. Department has put a wagon constructed for the purpose, into the letter-carrier service of this city. It is in excellent taste, drawn by one horse, and attracts much attention. It has separate compartments for letters, books and documents taken for delivery from, and return to, the office. It promises to be a success.

NEW-OUT CROPPINGS,

Or old devilries in a new quarter. Now comes bubbling up from the old Democratic caldron of devil broth, a new feature, or an old one in a new face.

A few days since a meeting of a few of the faithful was held in a western city to consult on a plan to secure a Democratic triumph in 1872. Many schemes were proposed and canvassed by the assembled savans, but it was generally agreed that the only plan which promises success is that adopted in Tennessee, Virginia and Missouri: To discard, for the time being, all ultra Democrats, such as Blair, Hoffman, Hendricks, &c., whose daring has led to defeat time after time, and to take up instead such men as Gen. Hancock and B. Gratz Brown, and whip in all Democrats to vote for them, hoping that these men may draw off enough of the Republican strength to constitute with the Democracy, a majority in the electoral college. There is no doubt about this plan being seriously canvassed. The Democracy are out and are likely to stay out, unless they can capture by strategy what they have failed to do by force. They point to the States of Missouri, Tennessee and Virginia as so many tributes to their wisdom and say, "we told you so, men elected by Democrats must act with Democrats;" Senter did it, Walker did it, and now B. Gratz Brown is going through the same process. These schemers claim that their little game so successful in States can be made as successful over the United States. How the game will work remains to be seen. To be a success, three things are necessary, first, they rely on carrying with them certain Republican Senators, (say four) not one of whom has yet agreed to the plan. Second, a Democratic convention must be elected, composed of moderate Democrats, or a split is to be made in the Republican convention, and a man nominated upon whom the ultra Democracy will unite without calling a convention. Third, the old Copperheads of the north and Rebels of the south must keep out of the field as candidates for Gubernatorial and Congressional honors. A question presents itself in this connection of this kind, can the Republicans of this country be fooled in a national canvass of this character with such examples of treachery before them, as the states of Tennessee, and Virginia?

SAN DOMINGO.

The news of the safe arrival of the steamer Tennessee with the commissioners at San Domingo, fell like a bomb shell into the camp of the grumblers, and "I told you so's." Hardly a person can now be found who ever entertained a single doubt as to the safety of the vessel and its precious freight. Hard as it may seem, there is but little rejoicing among the few opponents of annexation, who in a fit of fanatical zeal had trained themselves to believe that the vessel was lost, by interposition of divine Providence, to vindicate the few who have carried personal spite into opposition to public measures. Thus far all the correspondents accompanying the expedition, unite in declaring the Island more beautiful and desirable than its warmest friends had claimed for it. Every line from the expedition thus far goes to prove that the assertions of Sumner, and the theories of Schurz against the annexation of the Island, are without foundation in fact.

In regard to the sentiments of the people, sturdy old Ben Wade wrote just before the sailing of the Tybee: "We find that the people are all in favor of annexation; that a vote was taken on the question twelve months ago; that the people were then unanimously in favor of it, and are now more vehement and enthusiastic in their desires to be annexed today than they were then. We find San Domingo rich beyond all comparison—richer and more fertile in soil than any of the surrounding islands." Thus is the President's judgment again vindicated and his traducers brought to shame by showing the facts in the case.

THE ENFORCEMENT ACT.

The Democrats in Congress upon the subject of the enforcement act, are like mad bulls with red shawls shook before them. They rave and tear, and go bellowing in those bodies until fairly exhausted. The subject being before the Senate on the 24th inst. was the occasion for another Democratic outbreak of misscalled eloquence, raving about the "sacred ballot box," "Tyranny," "the bayonet," &c., the same old stock in trade upon which they have been trying to do business for ten years past. No one will object to the arguments made use of by them, if made in a good cause, and honestly used, but it should not be forgotten, by those who read the buncombe speeches of these gentlemen, that they just as loudly declaim against every measure which is calculated to expose the facts which make enforcement acts necessary, as they do against the enforcement acts themselves.

In the House every Democrat voted against sending the Committee on Elections to Louisiana, to investigate the manner in which the election was conducted in that State which reported forty thousand majority for Seymour, and a full Democratic delegation in Congress. The Committee was sent, and as a sequel two Republicans were seated and the elections in the remaining three districts, declared to be so wholly fradulent that they were void. In 1870 a fair election was held resulting in the election of a full Republican delegation and an aggregate Republican majority in the State of thirty thousand.

When the House voted for a special Committee to investigate election frauds in New-York city, every Democrat voted against the measure. The Committee went and developed the most frightful frauds in registration, ballot box stuffing, ruffianism at the polls, and barefaced purjury in issuing and obtaining naturalization papers.

When it was proposed in the Senate to appoint a Committee to investigate affairs in the South, every Democrat Senator declaimed against it, and when the joint Resolution appropriating funds to enable the Committee to perform the duties assigned them, every Democrat in both Houses took occasion to denounce it as a political move, or voted against it in order to prejudice the people in advance against any report which might be made. That the Democracy at large are either, as a body, guilty of the frauds charged upon them, or that they fear investigation of the result of their teachings is very naturally suggested by the election of their Representatives in the House and Senate. If innocent, they would court investigation, being guilty, they fear the consequence. Appropos of this, it was asserted a few day since, by an old gambler from New York city, who seems to be posted, that the State of New York was lost to Henry Clay, in 1844, (to use his own words) because the "fool Wigs" were too damned honest to invest ten thousand dollars in New York city.

It is not denied by Republicans that the enforcement act is severe and searching in its character, yet it has been shown by the various investigations held that the mischief sought to be remedied, will not yield to any milder treatment. It should be remembered by honest Democrats, who do not intend to violate the law, that none of its pains or penalties, can by any mischance, fall upon them. The Republicans voting solidly for such a measure, shows that they do not fear its penalties for themselves or friends. The Democrats, on the other hand opposing, show that they do fear the workings of the law.

It must not be forgotten that the intent of the law is to secure a fair vote of all the people, the Democracy oppose the law, ergo they are opposed to a fair vote of the people. This being the case, how can honest Democrats vote with a party thus committed against fair election? This question is worthy of more than passing notice by every candid man without regard to party prejudice.

We are sorry to learn that the litigation in regard to Washington and Jefferson College is not likely to be determined during the present year. We understand that a gentleman who was in Washington city a short time since made inquiry touching the condition of cases before the U. S. Supreme Court, and ascertained that only some eighty odd had been disposed of, and as the college case is numbered something over two hundred on the list, there is little hope of it being reached until 1872.—Washington Examiner.

DIED.

MORRISON—At the Beaver County Poor House, on the 23d ult., Eliza Morrison, aged 32 years.

Obituary.—Died, February 18th, at the residence of her father—William M. Douds—in Beaver Falls, Pa., Mrs. Barbara A. McMillin, wife of J. H. McMillin, in the 20th year of her age.

The deceased, at an early age, made a public profession of her faith in Christ, and connected herself with the presbyterian church, of which she continued a consistent and faithful member until her death. Although she expressed a desire that her health might be restored, yet she was resigned to the will "of Him who doeth all things well." Through all her sickness, which lasted about four months, she was never known to murmur or repine. On the day of her departure, and but a short time before she fell asleep, when asked by her husband, "Is Christ precious? Can you trust all to him?" She answered, unhesitatingly, in the affirmative. Whilst all around her were bathed in tears, she alone remained calm; and sank to rest as gently and serenely as the summer's sun sinks behind the western hills. Mrs. McMillen was a faithful and loving wife, and a devoted Christian. She leaves a husband and a large circle of friends who mourn their loss; but not without hope, for we trust that she has gone to that land where "the inhabitants shall not say I am sick; the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity." Though we hope to meet our loved one "in that better land," yet the thought of our loss is a grief almost too heavy to be borne.

> "But wherefore weep? Her matchless spirit soars
> Beyond where splendid shines the orb of day;
> And weeping angels lead her to those bowers
> Where endless pleasures virtue's deeds repay.
> And shall presumptuous mortals heaven arraign;
> And, madly, God-like Providence accuse?
> Ah! no; far fly from me attempts so vain.
> I'll ne'er submission to my God refuse.
> Yet is remembrance of these virtues dear;
> Yet fresh the memory of that beauteous face;
> Still they call forth my warm affection's tear;
> Still in my heart retain their wonted place.

In the wonderful medicine to which the afflicted are above pointed for relief, the discoverer believes he has combined in harmony more of Nature's most sovereign curative properties, which God has instilled into the vegetable kingdom for healing the sick, than were ever before combined in one medicine. The evidence of this fact is found in the great variety of most obstinate diseases which it has been found to conquer. In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. By its great and thorough blood purifying properties, it cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short all the numerous diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful purifying and invigorating medicine.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy. For the cure of Habitual Constipation of the bowels it is a never failing remedy, and those who have used it for this purpose are loud in its praise.

The proprietor offers $1,000 reward for a medicine that will equal it for the cure of all the diseases for which it is recommended.

Sold by druggists at $1 per bottle. Prepared by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Sole Proprietor, at his Chemical Laboratory, 133 Seneca street, Buffalo, N. Y. [illegible] for a pamphlet.

COMMISSIONERS OFFICE, BEAVER,
February 24th, 1871.

Sealed proposals will be received at this office, by the Board of county Commissioners, until Saturday March 18th, 1871, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the masonry and superstructure of five Iron Bridges, of about fifty-five feet span each, and about eighteen feet roadway; to wit: One over Block-House Run in Pulaski township, where the Harmony road crosses the same; one over Brush Creek, near Mechanicsville in North Sewickley township; one over the same creek, at Unionville in New Sewickley township; one over Big Travis' creek in Hanover township, where the Georgetown and Pittsburg road crosses said creek, and the iron structure of the bridge at Keefer's Mill, over Big Travis' creek, also in Hanover township. Proposals for the structures must be accompanied with a statement giving the total weight of the cast and wrought iron of each bridge; the general working strength and the ultimate or breaking strength per linear foot, as well as the greatest local load each bridge will sustain. Plans and specifications for the masonry of said bridges may be seen at this office from the first day of March until the day of Letting. The Commissioners will reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

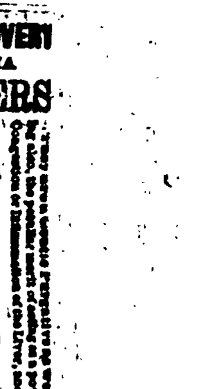
A GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERY!
Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS.
Hundreds of Thousands
Bear testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
WHAT ARE THEY?



THEY ARE NOT A VILE FANCY DRINK, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell.

$100 will be given for an incurable case, provided the bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effect.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

PIN, TAPE and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French and Spanish.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

LINCOLN.

Lincoln and the Michigan Captain—An Incident Not Before Published.

In the Spring of 1864, during the darkest days of the Rebellion, a captain of the Seventh Michigan Cavalry had been dismissed from the service without any notice or hearing whatever, and it was only by the aid of the Hon. Judge L., then a member of Congress from Michigan, that the Captain was enabled, after several weeks' close application, to hear what the charges were against him. Finally he succeeded in getting his case ordered before a commission for investigation, and he was reinstated, with the promise that the Governor had not promoted any one to his place in the line. The captain then applied to Governor Blair, and it appeared that the place was still vacant, but upon arriving at the regiment, then near Brandy Station, Va., he found that a Lieutenant had been promoted and was then in command of his company, thus leaving him out in the cold. This was rather aggravating to the captain, as he had several times offered his resignation, but could not get it accepted, and to go out in that way did not suit him. So he lingered about the Capitol several months, not knowing just what to do, and no one apparently could do anything for him.

Finally he determined to go to "Old Abe" himself. So off he went to the White House and sought an interview with the President, but though he waited about the ante room day after day for a week, there were too many eagles and stars and those having more important cases, so that he could not get a sight of the President. But he learned the "ropes" and found that at a certain hour in the afternoon the big doors were usually thrown open, and the President, in the greatness, of his heart, received every body at once, and a score or two could all make a rush into his office and ply him with all sorts of wants. So finally the Captain determined to take his chances with the rest, and one day when the doors were thrown open he went in with the crowd, but took a back seat in a corner and watched all that was done, never moving from his place until the last one had done his business and gone out, and still he remained quiet as the President turned to his desk and apparently finished some matter of business then on his mind, when the President at once raised his head and turned toward the Captain, looking very haggard and careworn, as he was most of the time during the spring of 1864. The Captain at once stepped forward and proceeded to set forth his grievances at some length.

The President listened for some time with close attention, but finally interrupted him, saying: "Well, young man, you have been talking to me about five minutes and I don't know what you want yet.

This rather disconcerted the young officer, but he at once came directly to the point, told the President that he wanted a place in the army, and as he had been wrongfully discharged, as his trial and reinstatement showed a possibility of mistake, he thought it was due to him.

At this the President leaned back in his chair, smiled and said, "Well, now, that reminds me of a little story of a fellow out west, who had a claim against the Government and prosecuted it faithfully about forty years, and finally, to get rid of him, Congress concluded to allow him the principal of his claim, which the fellow pocketed and left. But the next Congress had hardly convened before the fellow was on hand, and with new vigor, pressed upon Congress his claim. Now that they had allowed his claim, they thereby acknowledged its justice, and he now wanted them to pay the interest."

"But," said the President, "I have a great many boys in the field and I can't make places for them." But, after entering into familiar conversation with the young officer, and telling him two or three other stories, causing him to feel perfectly at his ease, he finally gave him some directions what to do, and said: "You may depend upon it if you do not get an appointment, there is no place for you."

The Captain expressed his thanks, and retired, and in about a week after the Washington Chronicle published the news that the Captain had a better appointment than he held before, and it had been confirmed by the Senate. On application he found his commission and orders ready, with three days to report at Louisville, Ky. He took a fast train, stayed one night with his friends in Michigan, and reported for duty in due time.

THE BRIGHTEST GEM IN THE WORLD.

The Romantic History of "Boss" Tweed's Diamond.

A few years ago Bill Tweed was glad to get an occasional job at plastering, but now William M. Tweed, by a timely alliance with Tammany and Jim Fisk, is worth a million. Now he is rich and powerful, he has more friends than before, and some disinterested ones among them paid $15,500 for a diamond, which they gave him on Christmas. The Jewelers' Circular calls it without doubt, the finest diamond in this country," and says:

"It is of wonderous beauty, and of the very finest water, fit for a Queen even of India to wear in her coronet. We never saw such an intense deep passion of light in any jewel before. So intense is it that when gazed into for a time, it seems to be absorbed in the carbon darkness of its origin, so to speak, and to assume a sort of fiery gloom. This is one of the marked characteristics of the diamonds of the old mines, and it belongs not to any of the newly found ones in the more recent mines. It might be between nine and ten carats, is exquisitely cut and faultless in every respect. It is a round stone, the table and cutlet small, the edge cut as sharp as a knife, and is so beautifully spread that it presents the appearance of a twelve carat stone. It is the richest jewel ever seen in this country.

About the year 1602 an agent of the celebrated diamond house of Girorami Ricardo, of Vienna, discovered this jewel in an ancient city in the interior of India, and with much difficulty forwarded it to his house in Vienna. At this time the stone weighed 21¼ carats, and was cut on the face only, as was the custom in those days, which were before the art of diamond cutting had reached anything like the perfection of modern times. Thinking, therefore, to enhance both its beauty and its value, Sig. Ricardo set his most skillful lapidaries to work upon it, and in the year 1611 it was delivered in a perfect state, and thus acquired an entirely new character of quality and splendor. If it were beautiful before it was now glorious beyond the reach of words to describe it. The cutting, however, reduced its weight to sixteen and three-quarters carats, and, notwithstanding the skill and care bestowed upon it, there was a flaw near the edge of it, although it was perceptible only to connoisseurs. In this state it was sold to a certain Russian nobleman, who had the misfortune to incur the displeasure of the Russian court and was exiled to Siberia in consequence. He carried the jewel with him in his weary journey and long imprisonment. It stood him in good stead, however, at last, for it helped to secure his freedom, although in what manner does not transpire. In 1725 the diamond passed into the hands of a French marquis, who was a person in high favor at the French court. So he kept it until he mysteriously vanished, and was lost sight of for some time. But presently in Baden Baden there appeared at the gambling tables this distinguished nobleman. After gambling all his other property, he staked this diamond and lost it, and then drew his pistol and blew out his brains.

"In the year 1741, after once more passing into the possession of a Russian, it turned up again in Paris, and was this time owned by a celebrated dealer, who put a fabulous price upon it, notwithstanding which he sold it to a French noble, who bought it as a present for one of the court beauties. It remained in France until about 1792, and then traveled to England, when it was discovered that the edges were slightly broken and chipped. It was enclosed, however, in an elaborate setting, and worn in a bracelet upon the arm of a beautiful woman when short sleeves were in fashion, and it had room and leisure to show off its splendor and the lovliness of the lady's arm to supreme advantage. In 1813 it again changed hands, and was bought by one of the richest baronets in England, who wore it in a ring on the first finger, as was then the fashion of gentlemen of distinction. It continued in this form until the year 1819, when it was recut, and the flaw mentioned before removed, during the process of which it was reduced to its present size, namely, 9¼ carats. It was nearly two years in hand before the final touches were put to it, which made it the most perfect, beautiful and brilliant gem of its size in the world. It was now sold once more to a French nobleman, who presented it to his bride at the wedding feast, and the lady's family held it until the breaking out of the present war, when the cruel necessities compelled the sale of it again.

"I Have No Chance."

Don't say that, young man. You have five chances on each hand. Then you have thirty-six, at least, in your head. Every faculty you have will vote you into office, if you only enfranchise it, and form a confederation between the freemen in your brain and the freemen at the ends of your arms.

Chances, plenty of them fall under our eyes, if we have only eyes to see them and hands to pick them up.

The falling of an apple was the opportunity for Newton to solve the secret of the skies.

A floating sea-weed, drifting by the vessel when the crew were uttering mutinous threats, was the chance siezed by Columbus to pacify an incipiant rebellion, and to inspire his men with the promise of a new continent and a new world of enterprise.

The picking up of a pin in a street of Paris by a poor boy, as he was going from a great bank, saddened at the denial of his application for a place, was the founding of the success and the prosperity of one of the great bankers of the queen city of the world. That simple act, illustrative of the economical spirit, was observed from the window; the lad was recalled at the same moment. Industry patience, and honesty did the rest.

A chance remark from a peasant girl, in an obscure country district, falling upon the ear of the young observing thinker Dr. Jenner, gave vaccination to the world, and saves hundreds of lives annually.

A pewter plate founded the Peel family. Robert, in the poor country about Blackburn, seeing a large family growing up about him, felt that some source of income must be added to the meagre products of his little farm. He quietly conducted experiments in calico printing in his own home. One day, thoughtfully handling a pewter plate, from which one of the children had just dined, he sketched upon its smooth surface the outlines of a parsley leaf, and filling this with coloring matter he was delighted to find that the impression could be accurately conveyed to the surface of cotton cloth. Here was the first suggestion toward calico printing from metal rollers. The "parsley leaf" on the pewter plate opened up a world of industry to Lancashire, and Sir Robert Peel to this day is called, in the neighborhood of Blackburn, "Parsley Peel."

Richard Arkwright, the thirteenth child, in a hovel, with no knowledge of letters—an underground barber, with a vixen for a wife, who mashed up his models and threw them out—gave his successful spinning model to the world, and put a sceptre in England's right hand such as the Queen never wielded.

A jumping tea-kettle lid is said to have put the steam into that boy's head who gave us the great giant of modern history.

A kite and a key in Franklin's hands were the grand-parents of our telegraph and all the blessings of modern inventions applying to electricity.

Don't say you have no chance, young man! You have the same chance, and better, than the world's greatest and best men have enjoyed. "Men uniformly overrate riches and underrate their own strength, the former will do far less than we suppose, and the latter far more."

"The longer I live," says one of earth's noble sons, "the more I am certain that the great difference between men, between the feeble and the powerful, the great and the insignificant, is energy—invincible determination—a purpose once fixed, and then, death or victory!" That quality will do anything that can be done in the world and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities, will be worth much without it.

The Marriage Question.

The celebrated German writer, Henrich Zchokke, in his pleasant little work, called "Labor Stands on Golden Feet," gives us Americans a droll notion of German love-making. The gallant gentleman when putting the fatal question to his fair Dulcinea, instead of dropping on his knee or throwing himself at her feet according to chivalric habits, or even of giving full play to his ardor and swearing by the pale moon a thousand burning oaths, in place of poetically painting their future bliss and describing that lovely home by the lake of Como that her beauty was to adorn more than all its natural charms, performs the operation in a most prosaic way. After stating his general views, he reaches his nearest approach to enthusiasm when he touchingly remarks: "I will work for thee; wilt thou save for me?" Here is a practical view of the marriage question, inculcated betimes; here is forethought and discretion, but not much valor, and little of the desperation of passion. What answer would such a query bring from a New York belle?

"Wilt thou save for me?"

"Indeed I won't; that is not the object of getting a husband as viewed by my lights. I will spend for thee, spend as fast as you can make; spend all your earnings, work as hard as you will. 'Save for you,' indeed, while Stewart's, or Arnold's, or even cheap and nasty Macy's opens its portals, and displays its silks and satins to my delighted gaze! Save for thee while there is a new bonnet to be had, or a diamond necklace left at Tiffany's, or Madame Didier asks five hundred dollars for making my dresses? Save for thee while that odious Mrs. Jones has mints of money, rides in her carriage with two footmen, and had her parlor furniture imported express from Paris? There may be some fun in that, but I cannot discover it. Work for me, of course you will, and see my wants be supplied, for I shall be a handsome enough wife to have somebody supply them."

That would be her answer, of course, and very right of her too. She has been brought up to do something better and more agreeable than saving. Even love in a cottage will not do for her; a Fifth avenue house is the only place where that sensitive plant grows with us. It must be fed on silks and damasks, and gems and jewels, and silks and laces. The little god of that kingdom is drawn in a nude condition in order that his worshipers may clothe him, and very handsomely the charming ladies of our liberal land always dress and deck him.

In our days, hearts and darts, living or loving, dying for one another, and all that sort of thing is "played out;" ausgespielt, as our German friends so acurately and idiomatically express it. We want a solid foundation to build matrimony on; blocks of bullion, and cement of greenbacks, and supports of bonds, and girders of stocks. None of your ethereal castles in the air will answer for our modern ladies of fashion. Chateaux en espagne are airy residences, and not suited to a northern climate with the thermometer at zero in the sun in winter, and ninety in the shade in summer. The fiancee of the period prefers bricks and mortar if they are more prosaic. Cottages can no longer be erected in this city under our fire laws, and lodges in vast wildernesses will do well enough in summer when the play of catching trout and hunting deer is being exacted, but will not accommodate a modern ball or give room for the German.

Our girls are not brought up to save; not they. Spending is their strong point, and in that we will back them against the world. An average American wife will get through more money than any female representative of any nation on the earth; and if our wives cannot ruin their husbands, nothing can. They hate account books and despise arithmetic, and know that it is low to go into the kitchen or look after their servants. Their fathers have worked for them all their younger days without limiting their expenditures. Why should not the husband follow this excellent example? It was only the other day that a fashionable lady sent her sapphire engagement ring, just given her by her lover, to Tiffany to be valued, and when she found it was not a 'doublet,' actually a sham, or at least half a sham, and only worth three hundred dollars, she dismissed her admirer ignominiously. She foresaw what such economy meant. She was to have "doublets" tried on her at every turn. Her furniture would be a sham, and cheap; her horses poor and ugly; her house in a side street, and not on the avenue; her dresses American silk, and made by third-rate milliners; her jewels mean pearls or common garnets; her carriage second hand, perhaps. Horrors! Was she not sensible in putting an extinguisher on such possibilities? "Save for thee" indeed? Why, where is the fun? Husbands are not engaged on those conditions, and their privileges are limited while their duties are plainly defined.—Citizen and Round Table.

Didn't Like Musk.

Judge ——, out west, of course, hated, to put it mild, the smell of musk. One hot day, the mercury standing ninety degrees in the shade, the Judge sat in his office, lolling in his easy chair, just placed in the draught—the little there was—doing his best to open the mystery of an opaque "last will and testament" submitted to his judicial determination. Just as the breeze grew sensibly strong and refreshing, the Judge's olfactories contorted under the smell of musk. His honor looked up from the ancient document he was considering, and beheld a lady standing in the open door. With a gentle wave of his hand, as if motioning to turn her aside, the Judge greeted her with: "Beg your pardon, madam, but you don't smell well."

"Sir," replied the astonished dame in a tone that would have frozen a less impertuable man in his seat, notwithstanding the excessive heat, and threw herself out of the office.

The Judge dropped to the contemplation of his paper. Directly a stern voice greeted him with:

"Are you the chap that insulted my wife?"

Again the Judge looked up from his work, and seeing a strong-built man standing in his doorway frowning upon him, answered promptly: "No, sir. Please be seated."

"Didn't you just tell my wife she stunk?" thundered the man.

"No, sir," said the Judge firmly, "I am incapable of saying that to anybody."

The man turned square on his heel and directly returned with his wife, saying:

"Wife, is that the fellow?" pointing to the Judge.

"Yes," said she, decisively.

"Well," said her husband, "he says he didn't say you stunk."

"No," replied she, "he said I did not smell well."

"Oh," broke in the Judge, in his blandest tone, "a misapprehension, it must be true, madam, you didn't smell well, or else you would have smelled me. You have a catarrh, have you not?"

The husband relaxed his fist, looked at his wife, smiled, then turned to the Judge and said:

"Squire, you're a cute one—you'll do for us."

And the Judge got a good case and a fat client.

He Couldn't Tell A Lie.

Alf. Burnett, in one of his letters "To the People," of Indianapolis, relates the following:

By the by, a good story is told of Ben. Butler. A short time since Ben. Butler and Wendell Phillips had business with the President, and arm-in-arm proceeded to call upon him. The President was busy and sent word that he would see them presently. Phillips and Butler strolled out into the conservatory, in the rear of the White House, thence into the garden. Butler and Phillips were engaged in an animated conversation on some topic, when Butler became excited.

A large hatchet, belonging to the gardener, was beside a tree; Butler casually picked it up and while talking, he made several deep gashes with it into some of Gen. Grant's favorite trees. Just at this juncture the President appearing, Butler hastily secreted it under his coat-tail.

After the compliments of the day, the President spied for the first time his mutilated tree, and with tones of vehemence inquired who had been cutting and gashing that tree? After a few moments' pause, Butler stepped bravely up to the President and took him by the hand, saying, "Mr. President, I cannot tell a lie; I cannot tell a lie; Wendell Phillips did it!"

A Catarrh.

Catarrh, as mostly understood, is a disease of obstruction; the humors that ought to be carried out through the natural channels are retained in the system, and usually produce cough and an increased discharge from the nose, which is sometimes of an offensive odor, and very annoying to the patient and his friends. Although not an easy disease to cure when it has become seated, and of long duration, yet in the beginning it can be run out as easily as a cough, or any other incipient lung or throat ailment. The medicine that will do this most efficiently is Dr. Keyser's Pectoral Cough Syrup. It is sure. It leaves no dregs behind, and it clears out the tubes and passages that lead to the lungs as perfectly as if they had been swabbed out with a sponge or camel's hair brush. Dr. Keyser's Pectoral Syrup is one of the wonders of scientific combination in the way of a sedative cough remedy. It is peculiar in another respect; it contains no opiates or somnolents to deaden the sensibility, and stop the secretions; it helps them go right on, and cures a cough quicker than anything else of which we have any knowledge. For years it has gradually worked its way into public confidence, until now it is the acknowledged cough medicine which nearly every one uses, and one which never fails in its effects. Reader, if you have a cough or any pulmonary trouble, try Dr. Keyser's Pectoral Syrup, and you will soon get well. Sold by most druggists, at 75 cents per bottle. If your druggist does not keep it, send to the Doctor's store, 167 Liberty street, Pittsburgh, and he will send it.

WALTHAM WATCHES.

The extensive use of these watches for the last fifteen years by Railway Conductors, Engineers and Expressmen, the most exacting of watch wearers, has thoroughly demonstrated the strength, steadiness, durability and accuracy of the Waltham Watch. To satisfy that class in all these respects, is to decide the question as to the real value of these time-keepers.

More than 500,000 of these watches are now speaking for themselves in the pockets of the people—a proof and guarantee of their superiority over all others.

The superior organization and great extent of the Company's Works at Waltham, enables them to produce watches at a price which renders competition futile, and those who buy any other watch merely pay from 25 to 50 per cent. more for their watches than is necessary.

These time-pieces combine every improvement that a long experience has proved of real practical use. Having had the refusal of nearly every invention in watch making originating in this country or in Europe, only those were finally adopted which severe testing by the most skillful artisans in our works, and long use on the part of the public, demonstrated to be essential to correct and enduring time-keeping.

Among the many improvements we would particularize:

The invention and use of a centre pinion of peculiar construction, to prevent damage to the train by the breakage of main-springs, is original with the American Watch Company, who, having had the refusal of all other contrivances, adopted Fogg's patent pinion as being the best and faultless.

Hardened and tempered hair-springs, now universally admitted by Watchmakers to be the best, are used in all grades of Waltham Watches.

All Waltham Watches have dust-proof caps, protecting the movement from dust, and lessening the necessity of the frequent cleaning necessary in other watches.

Our new patent stem-winder, or keyless watch is already a decided success, and a great improvement on any stem-winding watch in the American market, and by far the cheapest watch of its quality now offered to the public. To those living in portions of the United States where watchmakers do not abound, watches with the above mentioned improvements which tend to ensure accuracy, cleanliness, durability and convenience, must prove invaluable.

The trademarks of the various styles made by the Company are as follows:

Medicinal.

WARNER'S PILE REMEDY.

Warner's Pile Remedy has never failed (not even in one case) to cure the very worst cases of Blind, Itching or Bleeding Piles. Those who are afflicted should immediately call on their druggist and get it for it will, with the first application, instantly afford complete relief, and the few following applications are only required to effect a permanent cure without any trouble or inconvenience in its use.

WARNER'S PILE REMEDY is expressly for the Piles, and is not recommended to cure any other disease. It has cured many cases of over thirty years' standing. Price One Dollar. For sale by druggists everywhere.

No More WEAK NERVES.

Warner's Dyspepsia Tonic is prepared expressly for Dyspeptics and those suffering with habitual Costiveness. There are very few who have not employed physicians for years to remedy what this preparation will do in a few weeks, by strengthening the nerves, increasing the circulation, restoring digestion, giving strength mentally and physically, enabling those who may have been confined for years to their rooms as invalids to again resume their occupations and all the duties of Life. One trial is all we ask to enable this remedy to recommend itself to the most skeptical. It is a slightly stimulating tonic and a splendid appetizer; it strengthens the stomach and restores the digestive organs to their healthy state. Weak, nervous and dyspeptic persons should use Warner's Dyspepsia Tonic. For sale by druggists. Price One Dollar.

COUGH no MORE

Warner's Cough Balsam is healing, softening and expectorating. The extraordinary power it possesses in immediately relieving and eventually curing, the most obstinate cases of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Catarrh, Hoarseness, Asthma and Consumption is almost incredible. So prompt is the relief and certain its effects in all the above cases, or any affection of the throat and lungs, that thousands of physicians are daily prescribing it, and one and all say that it is the most healing and expectorating medicine ever known. One dose always affords relief, and in most cases one bottle effects a cure. Sold by druggists, in large bottles. Price One Dollar. It is your own fault if you still cough and suffer. The Balsam will cure.

WINE OF LIFE.

The Great Blood Purifier and Delicious Drink. Warner's Vinum Vitæ, or Wine of Life, is free from any poisonous drugs or impurities, being prepared for those who require a stimulant. It is a splendid appetizer and tonic, and the finest thing in the world for purifying the blood. It is the most pleasant and delicious article ever offered to the public; far superior to brandy, whisky, wine, bitters, or any other article. It is more healthy and cheaper. Both male and female, young or old, can take the Wine of Life. It is, in fact, a life preserver. Those who wish to enjoy good health and a free flow of lively spirits, will do well to take the Wine of Life. It is different from anything ever before in use. It is sold by druggists. Price One Dollar, in quart bottles.

EMMENAGOGUE.

Warner's Emmenagogue is the only article known to cure the Whites, (it will cure it every case.) Where is the family in which this important medicine is not wanted? Mothers, this is the greatest blessing ever offered you, and you should immediately procure it. It is also a sure cure for Female Irregularities, and may be depended upon in every case where the monthly flow has been obstructed through cold or disease. Sold by druggists. Price One Dollar.

Sold by all Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of One Dollar and a Quarter. Address 619 State street, Chicago.
